Generations

"I want my arms around them all."

James V. Zizzi describes it as a return to the nesting instinct. It's only natural to rejoice a bit when the last of the kids moves out. Care to dance? I'll get the champagne. But eventually there are grandkids you want to spoil. Or perhaps a rather large and still growing extended family. Many of the clients of James V. Zizzi express a desire for a place for all to gather to celebrate, to laugh, to remember, and come back to … for generations.

A place with a huge hearth where old memories can be relived, new ones created. A place where meals can be prepared and secret family recipes shared. A place with expansive windows overlooking the children safe at play.

Some builders see empty nesters as a market opportunity. James V. Zizzi sees them as part of his growing family.

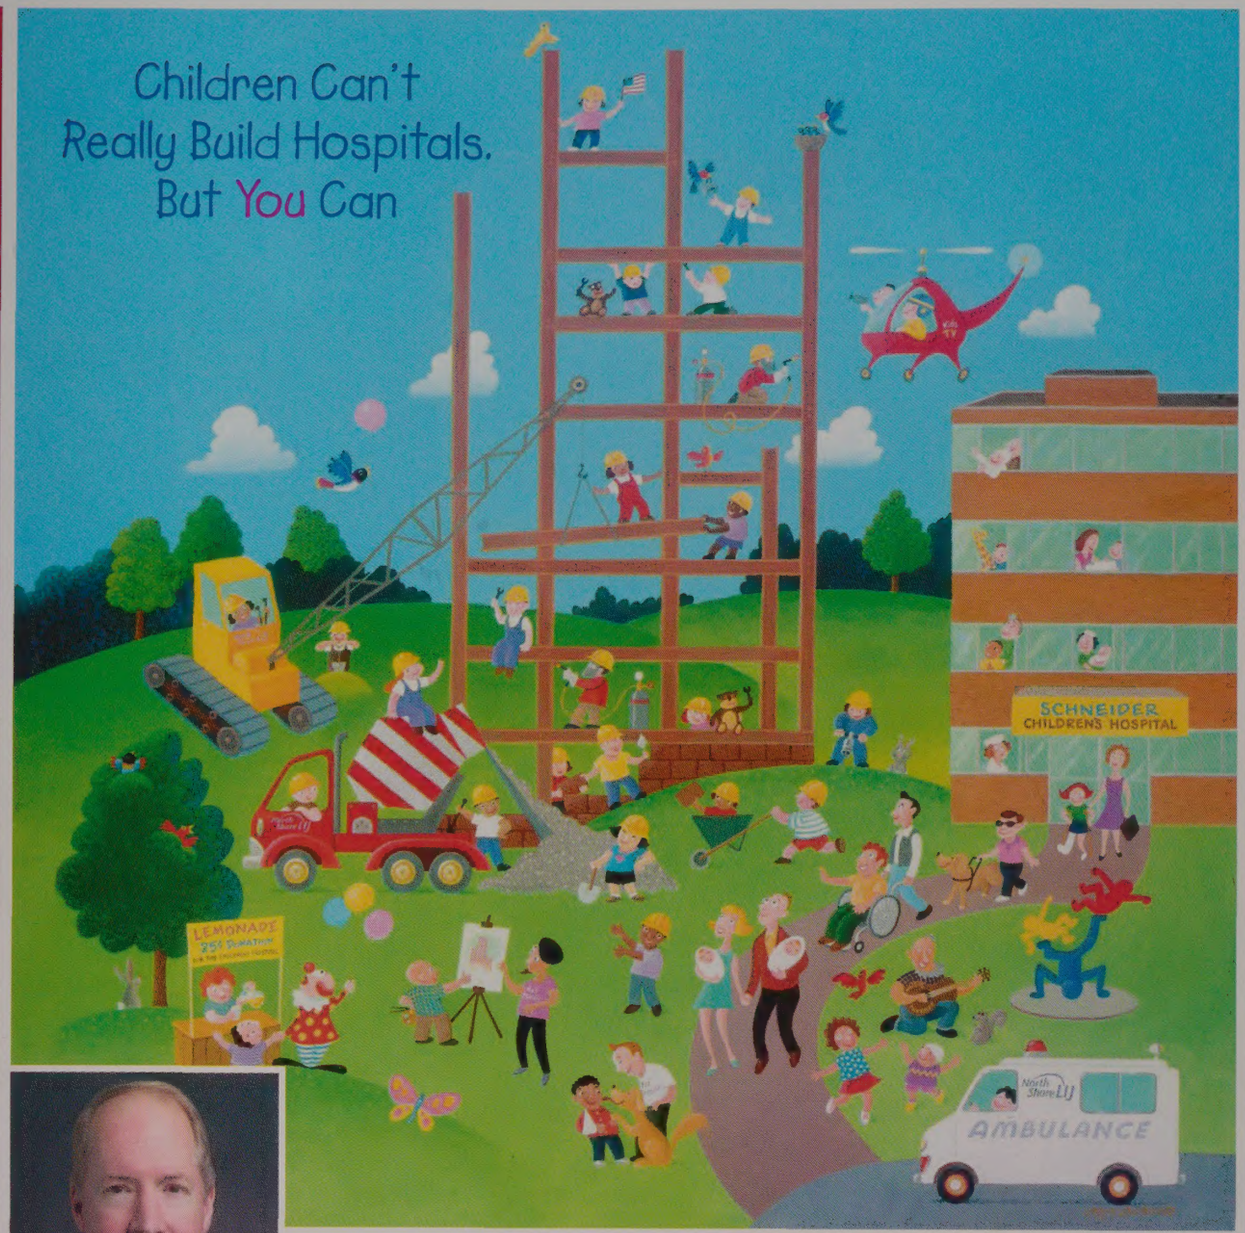
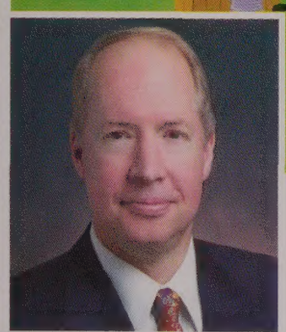
Children Can't Really Build Hospitals. But You Can





John Swainson
President & CEO,
CA

"CA is very pleased to support Schneider Children's Hospital in their commitment to deliver world-class pediatric care to the children who need it most."

At CA, we are committed to improve the quality of life in communities where we live and work worldwide. We take special pride in supporting organizations, programs and initiatives that enrich the lives and well-being of children and young people. By supporting Schneider Children's Hospital and establishing the CA Pediatric Wellness Center, we achieved both.

Schneider Children's Hospital is an extraordinary nexus of world-class pediatric care and exciting new research, where children from around the corner and around the world find hope and healing. It has earned an international reputation for excellence and innovation in pediatric oncology, cardiology, neurology and trauma. What's more, as the host of one of the nation's largest pediatric residency programs, Schneider Children's Hospital is putting an indelible stamp on the practice of pediatrics worldwide.

But with more and more sick children seeking treatment each year, the Children's Hospital is bursting at the seams. We must build a new inpatient hospital. Our children deserve it!

And that is where we need your financial support. Schneider Children's Hospital has embarked on an ambitious quest to raise the $100 million it will take to build this new hospital to serve the growing needs of sick children worldwide. There are many opportunities for families and corporations to create a lasting legacy while making a critical difference in thousands of young lives.

Call 516-465-2569 today and help us make this dream come true. Their hope is in your hands.

Hampton Jitney Gets The Show On The Road.

Announcing the Upcoming Show Tours Lineup...

"It's About Time, Girlfriend" – Allenberry Resort Inn & Playhouse, Boiling Springs, PA Sat., July 29th – Sun., July 30th (overnight trip) - $299 pp. single occ., $250 pp. double occ. It's time for just the "girls" to get away from it all. Allenberry is surrounded by forests, meadows, rolling hills and a picturesque creek to put you in a relaxing state-of-mind. There are lots of choices and fun things planned including a "margarita party" riverboat cruise, aerobics and make up classes (optional), Rosemary House tour, afternoon tea, dinner buffet, Playhouse show ticket, deluxe round-trip transportation and more. SF

Maine Lobster Festival Wed., Aug. 2nd - Sat., Aug. 5th (four day tour) - $835 pp. single occ., $620 pp. double occ., $575 pp. triple occ. Join people from all over the world for the Maine Lobster Festival, which seems to get better every year! Eat some lobster and tour this beautiful part of Maine. Package includes 3 nights hotel accommodations at the Boothbay Harbor Inn, 3 full breakfasts, 1 lobster/clambake luncheon with boat cruise tour aboard the Argo, 2 dinners, admissions (outlined in itinerary), deluxe round-trip transportation, escort throughout, and more. SF

2006 Yankee Game Schedule August 17th; September 26th - Call for opponents, game times and prices. All Game Packages include deluxe round-trip transportation to Yankee Stadium. There is NO SMOKING or ALCOHOL permitted on board the motorcoach. SF

The New York Philharmonic Presents: Andrea Bocelli Wed., Sept. 6th - $185 pp. The best-selling classical recording artist of all time makes his Philharmonic debut, performing an intimate evening of romantic arias. Package includes: third tier concert ticket, dinner at one of New York City's finer restaurants and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Peddler's Village & New Hope, PA Mon., Sept. 11th – Wed., Sept. 13th (three day tour) - $425 pp. single occ., $399 pp. double occ. Visit a charming eighteenth century style village set on 42 acres of landscaped gardens, brick walkways, 75 specialty shops, several restaurants and a wonderful Spa. There's something there for everyone! Package includes 2 nights hotel accommodations at the Golden Plough Inn, welcome reception, discount coupon book, 2 breakfasts, 1 dinner, deluxe round-trip transportation and more. SF

Itzhak Perlman at Lincoln Center Sat., Sept. 16th, $165 pp. Prepare for the ultimate experience! See the reigning world-renowned violinist with Lorin Maazel, conducting. Package includes dinner at one of New York City's fine restaurants, orchestra concert ticket and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

Mohonk Mountain House – Shawangunk Mountains Sun., Sept. 17th - $110 pp. Visit this historic landmark resort located at the top of the Shawangunk Ridge and surrounding Lake Mohonk. Enjoy thousands of acres of unspoiled scenery and beautiful rock formations. There are 128 gazebos overlooking the mountains and the only structure on the virtually untouched land is the sprawling Victorian Mohonk Mountain House. Package includes hot and cold buffet luncheon, carriage ride, Victorian tea, deluxe round-trip transportation and more. SF

Wicked Wed., Sept. 20th - $175 pp. If you think you know the two iconic witches from Oz – the Wicked Witch (Elphaba) and the Good Witch (Glinda) – think again. Wicked takes a revisionist look at an American icon of evil and discovers how the young Elphaba, a passionate, committed young woman from Oz, becomes the Wicked Witch of the West. Her character is contrasted with that of her school roommate Glinda, who grows up to be the Good Witch. Package includes orchestra show ticket, lunch at one of NYC's fine restaurants and deluxe round-trip transportation. SF

"Gardens and Glass" – Chihuly at The New York Botanical Garden Sat., Sep. 23rd - $70 pp. The stage is set for a breathtaking show – renowned artist, Dale Chihuly brings his spectacular glass sculpture to The New York Botanical Garden this summer in a stunning exhibition designed specifically for the Garden's collections and vistas. Package includes admission to the garden, self-guided tour, lunch on your own with a $10 voucher, outdoor Chihuly exhibition pieces, Chihuly display at the Rose Garden, deluxe round-trip transportation and more. SF

New Hampshire Fall Foliage Tour and Dinner Train Sun., Oct. 1st – Wed., Oct. 4th (four day tour) - $825 pp., single occ., $625 pp., double occ., $595 pp., triple occ. An extremely scenic tour is in store for you on this popular excursion to one of the finest resorts in New Hampshire. Package includes 2 nights hotel accommodations at The Mountain Club at Loon Mountain, 1 night hotel accommodation at The Williams Inn (MA), 3 full breakfasts, 2 dinners, 1 dinner train (exquisite five-course meal), gondola ride to the top of Cannon Mountain, deluxe round-trip transportation and much more. SF

Ocean City, Maryland Mon., Oct. 2nd – Thurs., Oct. 5th (four day trip) - $695 pp. single occ., $535 pp. double occ., $490 pp. triple occ. The weather in Ocean City is warm and inviting, the ocean and white sand beaches sparkling. The famous boardwalk buzzes with activity and the entertainment is unsurpassed. Package includes 3 nights hotel accommodations in an oceanfront suite, 3 full breakfasts at the Coral Reef, 3 dinners (one at the Coral Reef, one at the Red Roost and one at Reflections Restaurant), escorted tours of Lewes, Delaware, the Nassau Vineyard and Cambridge, Maryland (along with a boat ride on the Cambridge Lady), antique shopping in Millsboro and Cambridge, deluxe round-trip transportation and more – ask your HJ representative. SF

Lake George, New York – Fall Foliage Tour Tues., Oct. 10th – Thurs., Oct. 12th (three day trip) - $435 pp. single occ., $325 pp. double occ., $310 pp. triple occ. Hurricane Alert

Week by Week with the Hamptons Almanac's Storm Watch Predictions

By Dan Rattiner

Here is the upcoming hurricane schedule for the Hamptons according to the National Weather Service.

Friday July 21 to Thursday July 27

No Hurricane activity for the Hamptons Friday to Sunday. On Monday, hurricane Beulah will form to the south of Cuba and begin to head north toward the east coast of Florida. By Thursday, after skipping over Cuba without causing any apparent damage, it will be off the coast of Savannah, Georgia packing winds of 140 miles an hour. It will be a Category 3. The weather in the Hamptons will remain clear through Thursday with heavy rains starting to pelt the Hamptons by Thursday night.

Friday July 28 to Thursday August 3

On Friday, two new hurricanes will form to the east of Bermuda. Known as Hurricane Charlie and Hurricane Dora, they will alter the course of Hurricane Beulah, sucking it in a more northeasterly direction. There will be hail in the Hamptons, and tides two feet higher than normal. On Monday and Tuesday, the Weather Service will issue an advisory to Long Island that Hurricane Beulah, now elevated to Category 4 and raging off the coast of North Carolina, will head directly over East Hampton. At 5 p.m. Tuesday, the National Weather Service will order the evacuation of East Hampton and part of Southampton Township west to Water Mill. It will rain in the Hamptons all weekend with accompanying winds up to 30 knots. However the sucking force of Charlie and Dora will unexpectedly pull it further and further to the east until, on Thursday, August 3, it will become apparent that Beulah will not hit the Hamptons at all but will slide off between Montauk and Block Island. However, the evacuation order for East Hampton will remain in effect.

Temperatures rise to the high seventies, with clear skies and big surf, signaling the arrival of Charlie and Dora, merged into one hurricane

Friday August 4 to Thursday August 10

It will be an unexpectedly sunny day on Friday, with eerily calm seas. There will be no wind at all. Hurricane Beulah will pass this day between Block Island and Nantucket and then turn eastward and pass between Providence, Rhode Island and Martha's Vineyard, then head out to sea. Winds will exceed 185 miles an hour and it will be a Category 5.

Saturday and Sunday will be among the most beautiful in the Hamptons. Temperatures rising to the high seventies, clear skies and big surf, which will be signaling the arrival of Charlie and Dora, which have merged into one hurricane, later in the week. Landfall is expected on Wednesday, August 9 at Hampton Bays, Long Island. At 11 a.m. Sunday, the National Weather Service will issue an evacuation order for the western half of the Township of Southampton.

Angry clouds and thunder and lightning will begin over the Hamptons on Tuesday morning. For those who do not evacuate, the local police urge that dogs and cats and other small pets be kept indoors. Hurricane Charlie-Dora will be off the coast of Virginia Beach, Virginia on Tuesday morning, then gain speed as it moves north. Winds will be 120 miles an hour as a Category 2 on Tuesday morning, then 150 miles an hour just passing over the tip of Cape May, New Jersey on Tuesday at noon, where it will have built to a Category 3. Landfall will now be predicted at Quogue.

Hurricane

Unexpectedly, on Tuesday night, Hurricane Charlie-Dora will abruptly turn east into the Atlantic away from land, then circle back and hit the boardwalk at Atlantic City at 5 a.m. the following morning. The Boardwalk will suffer a few planks torn up, but behind it, the old Fishermen's Casino and Martinville Towers Hotel, which is abandoned and scheduled for demolition in September, will be completely destroyed. Sun with occasional rain throughout the Hamptons on Thursday with the highs in the low 90s. Huge surf, very gnarly at Ditch.

Friday August 5 to Thursday August 11

As Hurricane Charlie-Dora moves inland from Atlantic City across the Pine Barrens of South Jersey, slowly losing steam, a report will show Hurricane Eduardo, up until this time contained in the Gulf of Mexico, busting loose by skipping over Florida and tearing up the old road tarmac of Alligator Alley from Fort Meyers to Fort Lauderdale, to emerge out into the Atlantic packing 90 mile an hour winds. This old road had needed to be replaced anyway. The storm will be a Category One, but it will be angry and will begin picking up speed, water and wind as it crosses over the island of Bimini to head north. There are a few trees down, almost all blocking the ocean view of the new Bimini Hilton. Predictions on this day include a report that, according to calculations, landfall will occur at Charleston, South Carolina but only if the cold front from Virginia heads south to meet Eduardo and bends it westward. That next day, Sunday, a bulletin will note that the cold front has not materialized as hoped. Eduardo, now a Category 4 hurricane with 150 mile an hour winds, will thus make landfall in Amagansett, New York on Wednesday. Accordingly, an evacuation from Montauk to Moriches is ordered on Sunday at 3 p.m.

Two days later, on Tuesday, the weather service will predict that Hurricane Eduardo, now designated by FEMA as the "Mother of All Hurricanes," will make landfall at Sagaponack, New York on Thursday between 4:15 p.m. and 4:45 p.m. Its rating is revised to Category 7, the first ever in this category, as winds are blowing at 210 miles an hour.

On Thursday, however, Hurricane Eduardo will unexpectedly stop all forward motion 80 miles off the coast of Wilmington, Delaware. Flood warnings and tides will be 4 feet above normal for Key West, Florida to Portland, Maine.

Friday August 11 to Thursday August 17

Eduardo will remain stationary all day Friday off Wilmington, Delaware. Tides will be 6 feet above normal. The National Weather Service will issue a bulletin predicting tides of 15 feet for Sunday, if Eduardo remains where it is.

But at 4 o'clock in the morning of Sunday, August 20, Hurricane Eduardo will come loose from its moorings and head due east out into the Atlantic, where, by Tuesday morning, it will reduce to a gale. On Wednesday, the National Weather Service will announce that this little summer shower formerly called Eduardo is no longer a threat to the United States. A cold spell will settle over the eastern end of Long Island on Thursday, with winds about 10 knots, highs in the 60s. Small craft warnings will be in effect.

Friday August 18 to Thursday August 24.

The cold weather will continue in the Hamptons until Sunday. On Saturday, the day before, the beginnings of a hurricane will be detected over the Kalahari Desert in Botswana, Africa, with winds of about 30 knots and a classic swirling drizzle. New sophisticat-

Southos, Minithumbs, Shoptils, Daredevils and Neighbors

By Dan Rattiner

If you come into the office at Dan's Papers on certain days, particularly on Tuesdays when this newspaper goes to press, you might think you have landed in a foreign country. We talk to each other in a completely unique language — and only we understand it.

"I need the minithumbs," I might say. This would be a request to the production manager for a print out of the newspaper in miniature thumbnail form. There are sixteen pages on a single piece of paper. You can't read the body copy. But you can see the headlines and the locations of the photographs and the ads. The minithumbs are, well, the minithumbs. As opposed to the "thumbnails," which consist of four pages on a single piece of paper.

"This is a Southo," I might say to Robin or Julia. Or "this is a Shoptil," to Maria Tennariello who does the Shop 'til You Drop" column. Many letters to the editor come into the paper. We shuffle them around as AskDan.

"HiRes" sounds like something from the Shinnecock Indian Reservation, but it refers to the best way for us to receive photos at the newspaper, in High Resolution.

"LowRes" means you get it faster and can look at it, but it is not of a quality to use.

"Can you get out of the front?" is a question you would ask a productioneer who is sitting at their computer laying out or proofreading an article — such as this one — that will appear in the front of the newspaper. If you need to get "in" there, you need to get the productioneer "out" because the software program can only accept instructions from one person at a time.

The productioneer, by the way (productioneers do not wear mouse ears or anything) works in "Quark," or "Photoshop," which are the names of software programs used to assemble a newspaper. A prospective productioneer is almost always asked "Do you know Quark?" and if the answer is to ask who that might be, we politely show them the door.

THE PRINCESS, THE ARCHITECT & THE PRETTY ELF

By Dan Rattiner

Once upon a time in the Kingdom of the Hamptons, there lived a beautiful princess who lived in a castle. Who would she marry? One day she met a dashing young Architect of the court, and though he was not royalty as was she, she married him. They raised a family and lived in the big castle, and everyone, especially all the peasants of that Kingdom, were very, very happy.

"Isn't she beautiful?" they would ask. "Isn't he handsome?" Indeed they made a fabulous couple. It seemed a match made in heaven.

One day the dashing Architect, after ten years in the castle with the princess, went out to Jobs Lane to Stevenson's Toy Store to buy presents for the children. And there he espied the prettiest elf in the store, a commoner named Diana, who was 17 years old and a senior at Southampton High School.

It's a long, long story what happened next, and you probably know it. It's nothing new. The dashing architect, bored with his life in the kingdom as often happens when a man reaches 47 and has a midlife crisis, took a shine to the beautiful young elf. He didn't put any moves on her at the time, but after that summer ended, he hired her for $50 an hour to work for him in his little architect shop, now bustling with business since he had wooed and won the beautiful princess. Soon, he typed something on her computer screen. "What would you think if I said I was attracted to you?" he wrote. The elf didn't know what to make of it. Was he serious?

The wooing continued. And soon there was jewelry and bonuses and even the down payment on a new Nissan Maxima. And trysts began. Oh, they began. And then continued on for a year until people began to notice.

Also, as the dashing Architect soon discovered, even the most fresh, most exciting, knee-buckling and stomach churning of lusty romances begins to fade after a while. Would it

Anyway, on Tuesday, you will surely hear the word "closing," as in, "I'm sorry but they are busy closing," referring to all the productioneers. You close a newspaper just as you close a show or close a door. Then the production manager gets busy "transmitting." Which, in this amazing age, means sending the data that is the newspaper, a billion bytes of it, by computer over a hundred miles to a printer in another state. When the paper is 300 pages, it could take a couple of hours.

Often, on a Tuesday, you'll hear the phrase "the end," as in "I'm staying till the end." It means that if it takes us until 4 in the morning to get the paper off to the printer, I'll be here.

"Who's taking an up?" means there is a phone call come in from someone who wants to place a classified ad, and they need a salesperson. Different salespeople are "up" at different times.

"How many skids have we got left?" refers to these huge banged-together wooden pallets upon which bundles of tied up newspapers are placed. The skids are lifted with forklifts and put on a giant semi-tractor trailer for delivery to Dan's Papers from the printer.

Our weekly Fourth of July edition this year exceeded 100,000 pounds. That's bigger than ten full-grown elephants.

You'll hear the usual sorts of telephone pages you hear at any office. "Kathy, you're wanted on three." Or "Anne Marie come to the front, please." But you'll also hear some less comprehensible pages. "Nicole, can we get a quarter in Entertainment?" Or "I need a spot for a Breaking News please, Robin."

This refers to a quarter page ad needing to be put in after deadline and a last minute news item.

"I've sold another Glossy," is pretty incomprehensible, but not when you realize that some of Dan's Papers is newsprint and some of it is on glossy paper.

We do our best to correct all the spelling and grammar in every article we publish and so it goes through several processes. These are called "manuscript," which is the original double spaced article on 8 1/2 x 11 paper. Then we have the "semi-finals" and the "finals."

Sometimes after the finals we find something else to fix. "I'm sending the final back," is how you would phrase that.

We have stuff for "New Kids." This refers to the "New Kids on the Block" column about new businesses opening up in the area that runs during the season.

In editing the paper, I could read an article and tell our managing editor, Robin Feman, that it's a "B." This means it goes in the front section of the book, but not at the top, where we have what we call the "lead." The "B" is shorter. It goes under the big story on the top, and it gets a one-line headline instead of two.

The B always begins on the right. Except when it doesn't.

"So it's a B on the Left," Robin once said to me, just to make sure she understood.

"Right," I told her.

I could say "I'm assigning it as a B," which

Long and Tall

Trying to Bust Through the Zoning Envelope in East Hampton Town

By David Lion Rattiner

There are a lot of rules and regulations when it comes to what you can do to your home out here in the Hamptons. The reason is simple — with all of the money that some of the people here have, there is no telling what kinds of whacky ideas they will come up with.

But it's not easy being a tall guy out here, especially if you want to make your house a little taller so that you don't bump your head all of the time. Even in such a case, the towns generally don't budge on the rules because of, "if you give a mouse a cookie, then he's going to want some milk" logic.

This is not good news for Allan Houston, the retired New York Knick's star, who just purchased a house in Sag Harbor. Mr. Houston stands at 6 feet and 6 inches, not unusually tall, but tall nonetheless, and he wants ceilings in his new home to be nine feet tall. That should give him enough room to jump around, should he be inclined to do such a thing. And why shouldn't he be able to have ceilings that are nine feet tall? The man just paid $1.5 million for a house that is on just over a quarter of an acre.

His plan is to tear down the existing house on the lot, which is located on a bluff overlooking the water, and put up his new house. The old house was built in 1974 and complies with the current zoning codes. But the new house that Mr. Houston intends to build has a couple of issues when it comes to code. He wants it to be taller, a house that is 3,878 square feet, complete with an infinity edge pool, which is a pretty sweet looking swimming pool that looks as if it is falling off the edge of the bluff. The old house is 1,283 square feet, so Mr. Houston, at least in the world of the Zoning Boards, is asking for quite a lot.

But an appeal for a variance has been sent to the Sag Harbor Village Zoning Board of Appeals to see if they will accommodate Mr. Houston. There are many other houses in the

EIGHT TEENS HOSPITALIZED AFTER FIGHT IN NOYAC

By Dan Rattiner

A week ago Tuesday, a 16-year-old boy from Southampton was escorted out of a birthday party in that town he hoped to attend. Those at the party later said he had come there drunk. They would not let him in. This boy, who was from the Shinnecock Reservation, came back home to reportedly tell his friends he had been called by the "N" word and had been beaten for his trouble.

Thus a group of 16-year-old boys who go to Southampton High School came together and two days later exacted their "retribution" on the white boys from the school who they believed had stepped over the line. What they did was to step way, way over the line.

The retribution came at a party being given at the home of the parents of Andrew Alessandrini, 18, who was holding a farewell get together for about 25 friends on Thursday night. His family was moving from the area. This was at 22 Turtle Pond Road in Noyac.

At about eleven p.m., with the high school kids hanging out on the deck, the lawn, around the pool and in the woods at the back of the yard, about thirty uninvited boys, many from the reservation, and others from the Hillcrest section of Southampton, came up the driveway. They were almost all schoolmates of those at the party. But they looked angry.

Allessandrini, who was not at the party on Tuesday, came up to one of them. "I said 'What's the problem?'" In answer to his question, the boy he asked punched him in the face.

What followed can only be described as an attack by one group of kids on another. Eight people were taken to the hospital with various head and body contusions. One boy needed stitches above his eye. Another suffered a area that have ceilings between nine and ten feet and Mr. Houston wants the same thing. But he has a pyramid law to deal with.

The pyramid law is a law that draws an imaginary line at a 45-degree angle from the lot's property lines with relation to its grade and a house is supposed to remain within that imaginary line that runs to the sky plane. His proposed house breaks that sky plane. Nine foot ceilings may not be in the cards for Mr. Houston. What's a basketball superstar to do? Well, he shouldn't feel alone, Mr. Houston is not the only one with height problems.

There is a house being built on Bluff Road in Amagansett. Well, not really.

A stop work order was issued at the building site as the house was being constructed when the Town of East Hampton noticed that something was a little odd about the house. It looked to be too tall, 5.5 feet too tall to be exact, and the town would have none of it. Richard Principi, the owner of the house, will not be bumping his head into any of the doorways however. The first reason is that the man does not stand at six feet six inches tall and the second reason is that he has gotten creative on how to lower the house 5.5 feet.

Instead of chopping off the roof of the house, (which is already built) sawing down the frame 5.5 feet and then plopping the roof back on to make it shorter, Mr. Principi plans on lowering the house at the foundation, in other words, he is going to sink it into the ground.

Don Sharkey, the chief building inspector for the Town of East Hampton has just approved the plan to lower the height of the house. It is going to be lowered from 34.5 feet into the sky to 29 feet. The way they are going to do this is by lifting the entire house off of its foundation and then having workers scramble underneath with chainsaws or what have you, to cut 5.5 feet away from the foundation. Then they are going to scramble the hell out of there and drop the house back down. That should do the trick.

Whoever said being tall makes things easier was never in the construction business in the Hamptons. • broken jaw. People were hit and when they were down, kicked. Alessandrini suffered a bruised lip and a gash on his forehead. Others attacked were one of the children of the Village Mayor and the son of a former town policeman. Those at the party either ran away or suffered terrible beatings. And then it ended, and the perpetrators were gone.

Arrested later by the police – identified as their attackers by the victims – were Shakeem Davis, Robert Riddick and Christopher Jenkins, all 16 and all of Southampton, and Dwane Allen, 19, of Riverhead. They were each charged with rioting, second-degree assault and criminal mischief, all of which are felonies, and third degree assault, a misdemeanor. Davis, it has turned out, is one of four boys who was charged with raping a 15-year-old girl in Sag Harbor earlier this year, and is being held in lieu of $85,000 bail. Lesser bail was set for the others, and Allen posted his, which was $3,500.

Police say that not all of those who crashed this party participated in the assault, and they are investigating to find out who attacked and who did not.

On the reservation, those who were involved have been interviewed one at a time by very upset adults in that community. And they all tell the same story. They believed there had been racial slurs and a beating on

The Great Cocktail Party in Bridgehampton and Oh, There's Polo

By Christian McLean

You would think that $2000 open-toed shoes would never mix with horse manure, but for six consecutive weekends of the summer, that and many other odd juxtapositions occur in the polo fields at Two Trees Farm in Bridgehampton (Supermodels using port-a-potties is another one). The weekly event which kicks off this Saturday with the 3-week Mercedes Benz Challenge is one of the largest events of the summer. It's society, it's Hollywood, it's fashion, and it all seems to be at our fingertips, well, for those on the VIP list, at least. Drive your convertible down the dusty path, park in a once glowingly green field, and navigate over ropes and cones to the white and blue tent perched on the east side of the pitch. Drop your name, get a bracelet and enjoy all the free drinks you want. Relax in the shade, catch up with friends, chat up strangers, and watch a little high-goal polo. Easy, right?

Well, what exactly goes into getting something like this together? Who are the teams, the players, the patrons, why are people giving you free drinks anyway? There's something more to the match than the decadence we have all come to enjoy.

At one point, Long Island was the polo capital of America. The Meadowbrook Polo Club in Old Westbury hosted some of the earliest U.S. Open Championships and in 1913, a crowd of 20,000 gathered to watch the matches. Even during the Great Depression, polo matches at the Meadowbrook Club boasted a record number of spectators.

In the Hamptons it is a different story. If the attendance breaks a thousand it would be impressive. But here, the tone is more of a not-so-private garden party than a sporting event, and with the right marketing, many of the same people would show up to a tent in the middle of a field even if there were no matches.

While we are enjoying each other and the

FROM MANHATTAN TO THE HAMPTONS IN 30 MINUTES

By Dan Rattiner

Let's say you work on Wall Street and want to get out to your estate in the Hamptons on a busy Friday afternoon. What are your choices?

Well, you could get your car out of the garage or get your driver to get your car out of the garage and drive to the Hamptons, which, in the traffic at that hour might take up to four hours.

But then consider perhaps a most interesting option — a helicopter. There are three heliports in Manhattan so there is one near you. Figure a ten-minute cab ride, a walk across the chopper pad and you're off. Thirty minutes later, you come down at East Hampton Airport. Or at the pad on Meadow Lane in Southampton. Or at Gabreski Airport in Westhampton. Somebody picks you up. From door to door, you're talking fifty minutes.

"Every Friday night, I get at least half a dozen phone calls from people who have used our service," said Pat Day of Liberty Helicopter. "They're at dinner at the house with their wife and children a hundred and ten miles away from where they had been just moments ago. They're thanking me for such a nice ride."

What does all this cost? A ride to the Hamptons on a Liberty Helicopter — Liberty is the largest helicopter charter service east of the Mississippi — will cost you either $3,100 or $6,000 depending upon which equipment you use. Either way it seats six. It's just that one is plusher than the other.

"All the equipment we use is made by Eurocopter. This is our 23rd year in business. Eurocopter is very reliable, and the very best," Day told me. "Their turbocharged A-Star seats six people in three rows looking forward and gives the most sensational views. Our luxury helicopter is the Dauphin. Same company. But friday at five: dava sobel's planets

By Joan Zandell

This past Friday evening the garden at the Bridgehampton Library was packed. The wind rustled in the trees and murmurs were heard from the crowd waiting expectantly to see Dava Sobel and hear her talk about her most recent book, The Planets.

She began by explaining that as a child she was taught a mnemonic in order to remember the order of the planets outward from the sun, which she uses to this day. "My very educated mother just served us nine pies." Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune, Pluto.

"I'm always amazed at the many ways in which planets come up," she says. "There are horoscopes, days of the week, I'm constantly finding themes that explore the planets, lunacy, for example, and the moon. In my book, I write about the woman who ate the moon. My friend Carolyn fell in love with an analyst of moon rocks. The fellow had fallen head over heels in love with her as well and wooed her with moon dust. He literally gave her the moon. Well, when I heard about it, I asked to see the moon dust. And she said, 'I can't show it to you. I ate it. There was so little.'

And then Ms. Sobel began to read. "As it entered her mouth, it ignited on contact with her saliva to shoot sparks that lodged in her every cell. Crystalline and alien, it illuminated her body's dark recessing like pixie powder, thrumming the senseless tune of a wind chime through her veins."

"Planets has many themes," she continued, "Mercury is about mythology. Venus is about poetry and is associated with beauty. Earth is about geography and discovering ourselves. Mars is about science fiction, aliens and alien threats." She stops and looks out into the audience to see how she's doing. "I don't know how I became such a space cadet," she says and chuckles quietly. "I like to travel the sea of solar eclipses. The next one is going to be over Siberia. I don't think I'll go to that one. It will be very cold.

"Jupiter is about astrology, which by the way takes a lot of heat. Jupiter is the planet with the greatest potential for positive effect on one's life. When Galileo discovered that there were four moons on Jupiter — its discovery gave him a promotion at court. Uranus and Neptune are about discovery. Pluto is about people coming here from far away and enjoying their citizenship, and later having it questioned. And Saturn is all about music.

"Pluto is the last of the planets. It was discovered in the 1930s by an American who was looking for it. Pluto was thought to be fairly large. But it has gotten smaller and smaller with time. Ten years ago, people started discovering moons around Pluto. Some astronomers would like it to be removed as a major planet.

"Did you know that there are 200 planets? One hundred and eighty were discovered in the last ten years. Three of them are out beyond Pluto. What are planets? The new definition will be determined in August. There is no definition of the word planet. Some aspects might include something that breathes, reproduces, consumes and eliminates.

"Will we be off the earth in 40 years due to global warming? Once an intelligent civilization arrives at technology, how do we prevent that technology from destroying us? Mars is really the only other planet that is fairly hospitable to us.

"Locating the earth in the universe has been a hard won kind of knowledge. There is an enormous amount of what we don't know. The lit up stuff is the lightest bit of dust in the universe. The rest is made up of dark stuff, dark matter, dark energy. There is something frightening about studying the universe. Looking at the sky can look so dark, so daunting. We are all star stuff.

"All this really all began when I was invited

Dennis Miller at WHB

Republican Dinosaur, Comic and ex-Football Analyst — Talks

By Mike Vilensky

It takes a seriously funny guy to have an entire theatre of New Yorkers laughing at politically-charged views as typically red as the cushions on the seats that fill the theatre. But that is just what Dennis Miller did, this past Saturday night on the stage at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center, the gorgeous, old-fashioned two-story theatre, standing in front of a sold-out house of Hamptonites. He touted President Bush ("I like the fact that Bush gets up there and says 'Let's kill some crazy fn' Islamics'"), knocking his audience's own senator ("If you didn't know that Bill [Clinton] was cheating on you, you're not smart enough to be my president"), and brushing off global warming concerns ("Do you think during the dustbowl they were blaming it on global warming? They were just wondering 'where the hell is the rain?' I remember when I was a kid — it was hot"). Miller, a married man with two sons whose unshaven face looks younger than its 53 years, a man who has had previous fame as an anchor on "Saturday Night Live's" Weekend Update and on his hit HBO show "Dennis Miller Live," stood ready to face his toughest audience yet (in the correct opinion of this publication): The Hamptons.

Wearing a simple grey sports jacket and denim jeans, Miller stood for his performance, holding nothing but a bottle of water to shield him from the glares of Democrats. He began his self-proclaimed "bitter, sarcastic repartee" with something he correctly felt that everyone could laugh at: fat people. "Missouri is like Vegas for people without teeth... it's one open DMV office, with a lot of human double-wides... if you're built like a tank, don't wear a tank top." He continued by calling liquid-like Krispy Kreme "Grey Goose for fat people who are too lazy to chew... a gastric Armageddon." As the theatre became filled with loud, hearty laughs from the audience, he let himself change continents and began to verbally assault the French (probably thinking, "make fun of fat Americans? Check. Got their attention. Now I can move on to the people I truly hate — the French and the liberals"). "The French are dead to me!" he proclaimed, in his strong, arrogant voice. In response to the new French law banning vending machines from schools, he said, "This is the French master plan to raise healthier cowards. They finally took a stand against someone — Little Debbie." He continued, stating "I'm surprised the French soccer player didn't head butt the Italian from behind, as the French have done historically," and ended his rant with "Paris is all they have left. Why don't we just buy it from them?" The French are a great comedic target, and he nailed it: the laughter kept on coming.

> "I'm surprised the French soccer player didn't head butt the Italian from behind, as the French have done historically."

Returning to a more universally American irritation, he said "Not turning over the stewardess population like they used to, are they?" He mocked the disingenuous decorum of flight attendants, smiling. "They don't even tell you they hate you. I'd rather they say 'listen, I made a terrible vocational error at age eighteen in exchange for free airfare to Barbados and now I'm a 36-year-old waitress at a shitty restaurant thousands of feet in the air.'" Ha! Give me my Diet Coke and free peanuts, angst on the side.

Modern flying is always funny, and Miller took full advantage of that, continuing his act by mocking the seriousness of the emergency exits on airplanes, stating "You've got to be a Navy Seal to sit next to the emergency door these days!" No, he will probably not save you in an emergency, he admits, but he doesn't expect you to save him, either. "The computer sat us together, you don't owe your life to me!"

With classic comedic staples like

Midwesterners, France, and flying taken care of, Miller moved on to touchier topics — race relations, global warming, and politics. He had the room rolling on the floor with his cynical egalitarianism. "I'm not a racist. Why judge someone based on the color of their skin when you can talk to them and find so many other reasons to detest them?" He confessed to having seen An Inconvenient Truth but not really buying anything past his movie ticket. Mocking the idea that temperature readings from 1906 are accurate, he said "1.8 degree change? I could go back to my hotel room, play with the thermostat, and not notice that difference." He called this global concern "a political Rosetta Stone" and said, "While there's still oil, nobody is going to use something else. When we run out of it, Americans will probably come up with an alternative in a year or two. As an environmentalist, I drive an S.U.V., so we can run out of oil sooner and start using something else." If he alienated part of his audience (the part who probably voted for Al Gore even before he came off as charming as he did in his documentary — which Miller admits he did, saying "if this was the Al Gore who ran for president, I might have voted for him"), it was not evident in the volume of laughter in the room. And all the New Yorkers could share a laugh over his next comment: "Alaska? I don't give a shit about Alaska. Okay..... you want to leave the immoral city life behind..... we're not going to Alaska! We're going to the Hamptons! Bush believes technology is the answer to oil? Yeah, he's drilling for technology in Alaska." Feeling confident, he continued on this path, defiling typically Democratic viewpoints (although for the record he called himself a Libertarian), stating, on Global Warming: "Isn't it a little narcissistic to think that this planet has been here for eons and eons but all this has happened within the seven decades we've been alive?" On Bill Clinton: "If he were any more low rent, he'd be a Spring Break destination." And it's not a political comedy act without some Monica Lewinsky jokes, so Miller chided: "To twenty-year-old women out there — if you get the chance to blow the president, do it! Even if just for the scrapbook moment. I'm not even gay and I would blow the president just for the story to tell the kids."

Miller had no reservations with his routine, so he's lucky it was witty. The man knew how to tell a joke, and this kept the New York audience laughing hard. He balanced his politics by just being funny. After making jokes about how he wanted to "kill crazy fn' Islamics" he would say something undeniably funny or realist, like (on racial profiling): "If you notice that nineteen of the men who attacked the two biggest cultural icons are all the same faith, that's not profiling, that's just minimally observing." Or, on the use of "the founding fathers" as defense in ACLU cases: "The founding fathers were blowing people's heads off for taxing their coffee," and, on immigration: "Our Borders bookstores are better protected than our borders..... I don't have a problem with Mexicans, but sign the god-damn guest book on your way in!"

Spoken in his sarcastic token tone, Miller was unafraid to touch the touchy topics. The audience ate it all up, from obesity jokes to pro-Bush jokes to Ashlee Simpson singing a cappella jokes. Does the encouraging response (consistent, loud laughter) that Miller received in Westhampton represent a shift in American thinking? As the New Yorkers smiled with Miller, it seemed that perhaps red and blue are forming purple — an ambiguous political everyone-fly zone where realpolitik meets liberalism, and crushes it like paper over rock. Cynicism is the constant political and humorous tone in this purple haze, where America is finally revered in a sort of arrogant albeit informed way (at one point Miller said, to a round of applause, that while America may not be perfect, "It is so far superior to anything else I have seen"), and Americans are free to say what they think — and let it be loud and funny as it dances on the border of offensive and honest. That is the comedic promised land of Dennis Miller.

Before the show, Miller walked around the town of Westhampton with his son, shaking hands and taking it all in. Was he relishing his time here while he could? He began his routine by stating: "I wasn't sure if I was allowed in the Hamptons anymore." He ran the risk of ruining the privilege, but from the sound of the loud laughter and the sold out ticket sales, he can be confident (as he always is) of one thing: he'll be allowed back.

The architect's rendering of 127 Main Street, Sag Harbor, in the future. It is in the center of the picture.

3 Years & Counting

The Longest Non-Decision About a Building is in Sag Harbor

By David Stoll

While it is a truism that "we have a government of laws and not of men," Jon Gruen may be forgiven for wondering whether in Sag Harbor Village, the opposite is true. As just about everyone in Sag Harbor Village knows, Mr. Gruen has, since the autumn of 2003, been proposing to erect a new structure at 127 Main Street to replace a smaller one on that site. One would think that approval (or not) of the plan would be based on the application of existing and defined rules. But according to Mr. Gruen, there is no legal or rational basis to stop the project, particularly in its revised form. This article tells the story of Mr. Gruen's project from his perspective.

Mr. Gruen and a colleague bought the property in 1998 under the name Denop LLC. Although located in a historic district, the small white building is generally considered to be non-distinctive, if not downright unattractive for the neighborhood. It is not designated as a landmark. Denop initially rented the space to an antique store and then later, Mr. Gruen sponsored an artist who, to this day, uses the space as a gallery. The property is zoned for both commercial and residential use.

Some time ago, Mr. Gruen retained local architect Mark Matthews to develop plans to erect a larger structure that would nevertheless comply with the zoning rules and blend into the historic district from an aesthetic perspective. When the plans were completed, he retained attorney Dennis Downs to submit an application to the Village Planning Board. Mr. Gruen notified his neighbors.

As originally conceived, the structure would be 7,000 square feet and would extend on the sides to the property lines. It would have space for two retail stores on the ground floor, and two apartments on each of the second and third floors. According to Mr. Gruen, while this may seem large in a vacuum, the size and configuration were both legally permissible and consistent with other commercial Main Street structures. A variance only for new parking would be required. Mr. Gruen said that, after the first Planning Board meeting, he was optimistic; indeed, one board member expressed pleasure that something was finally being done with the

NEW BEATLES PIX FROM THE SIXTIES SHOWN HERE

By Debbie Tuma

A special collection of never-before-seen photographs of the Beatles, during their most creative and spiritual period in 1968 in India, opened last Saturday at East End Books in East Hampton.

This collection of 54 color photographs was taken back then by Paul Saltzman, an international filmmaker from Toronto. In 1968, Saltzman was in India making a documentary film. He was twenty-four-years old. One day, a letter came to him in New Delhi that changed his life. It was from his girlfriend, who said she wanted to break up, because she was now living with someone else. While trying to deal with his devastation, Saltzman was told by friends that he should go to an Ashram and learn to meditate.

"They said it would take away the pain, and that's all I wanted, at the time," he told a crowd of Beatles fans at the opening reception. "So I went to Rishikesh, to the Ashram of Mahareshi Mahesh Yogi, and when I arrived at the gate, they told me the Ashram was closed for the next week, due to the arrival of the Beatles and their wives."

Most people would think this a fortuitous stroke of luck, but to Saltzman, it just meant more days of agony. "I decided to camp outside the gate for the next week, because I was determined to learn meditation," he said. After about eight nights of camping, he entered the Ashram and learned to meditate with Mahareshi's assistant, which took about five minutes.

"But I felt ecstatic — all the emotional pain left my body, and I felt lighter, freer and more at peace than I had ever felt," he recalled. Once inside, they told him he could remain at the Ashram to continue meditating and relaxing. One day, Saltzman was walking around the grounds, when he saw a long table on the bank of the Ganges River, and sitting around it were all four Beatles, with their wives or girlfriends, and their road manager, Mal Evans. John Lennon was with his first wife, Cynthia; George Harrison was with his wife, Patty Boyd; Ringo Starr was with his wife, Maureen Starkey; and Paul McCartney was with his girlfriend, Jane Asher. They were also joined by Donovan, who was then 21, Mike Love of the "Beach Boys," and Mia Farrow, who was then 21, and was also there to mend her bro-

review: all that jazz

By Isabel Bacon

Bob Fosse's semi-autobiographical film, All That Jazz, begins with snapshots of a tape cassette player playing classical music, Alka-seltzer fizzing in a glass of water, Roy Scheider reaching for prescription pills once his cigarette is put out by the shower, and the caricature of Fosse energetically saying, "It's Showtime" to his reflection in the bathroom mirror — an average day in the life of the film's main character, Joe Gideon. This last Thursday night, as a part of their Red Carpet Film Series, Guild Hall screened Fosse's semi-autobiographical film with the dated air conditioner in the John Drew Theater humming in the background and Fosse collaborators present. Roy Scheider, who was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Actor for his role as Joe Gideon, and Tony Walton, who won an Academy Award for Best Art Direction, attended the screening at Guild Hall and stayed behind for a question and answer session at the end of the film.

In the late 1970s Fosse wrote the script for All That Jazz, in collaboration with Robert Alan Arthur, which documents the end of Joe Gideon's life, with the intention of directing an end to his own life. Joe Gideon is a passionate dancer, choreographer, womanizer, and drug-user with so much going on in his life at once, much like Fosse, and an attitude of constant self-criticism. Though at times confusing, the film's chaotic art direction and cinematography, shifting back and forth between the present, the past, and fantasy suggest how frenzied Fosse's life actually was. The same morning scene of music, cigarettes, and pills repeats throughout the film, each time the energy in Gideon's, "It's Showtime" dying a little bit. In the present, Gideon's life revolves around the multiple women in his life, the cutting-edge choreography to the new musical he is directing, and the movie he is directing much like the real-life biopic, Lenny, that Fosse was working on simultaneously with a musical. Though this life seems frenetic enough to portray in a film, All That Jazz also shares screen time with a fantastical setting resembling the backstage, shall I say, to Gideon's life where he has discussions with the Angel of Death.

When the constant cigarette hanging out of his mouth and the heart-pounding drugs catch up with Gideon, sending him to the doctor and provoking harsh coughing fits, it is hard to tell, both by the characters in the movie and the audience, whether or not Fosse's character really cares whether he lives or dies. Even in the hospital, Gideon's partying does not cease, and he sneaks cigarettes, wine, and feels up the nurses during his resting time. The movie ends with Gideon's Broadway-esque death, set in a mirrored disco with music and dancing, and Scheider standing on the hospital bed in his dancer's costume, singing, "Bye, bye, life/ Bye, bye happiness/ So long loneliness/ I think I'm gonna die."

At the conclusion of the showing of the film, Scheider said that the singing and dancing parts of his role were what made him most anxious — it really is Scheider's voice singing in the finale. Not initially cast for Gideon's role, which was originally intended for Richard Dreyfuss, Scheider arrived to the set late and so Fosse demanded he learn all the dancing first and then catch up with the script.

I went to see All That Jazz last Thursday, July 13, blindly, knowing nothing about the movie or Bob Fosse, on a girls' night out with my mother. And while the film was difficult to follow at times, partly because of the worn-out film reel's sound, I left Guild Hall with a better understanding of Bob Fosse through Joe Gideon, played by Scheider. As it happens, Scheider did say that by the end of the film, Joe Gideon seemed to have taken on a personality all his own, the costume designers referring to the character as Joe, not Roy or Bob. How remarkable that is, when a director is directing an actor to play himself, and the result is an independent star.

ROSS II

A New York Home for the Ross Global Academy is Found

By, Alexandra Roosenburg

East Hampton's Ross School has received many pages worth of press this summer. From a multi-page spread in Dan's Hampton Style to a benefit concert featuring Aretha Franklin, we've all become familiar with Courtney Sale Ross' educational brainchild. Lately, however, a new, though similar, name is in the news. Ross Global Academy is a charter school, again stemming from the intellectual inspiration of Courtney Ross, which is set to open in Manhattan's Lower East Side this September, 2006.

This week, it was determined that Ross Global will be placed into the space formerly occupied by City Hall Academy on the ground floor of the Tweed Courthouse just steps from City Hall in lower Manhattan. Although attempts earlier were made to place the Ross students in another school, the idea of sharing the space and resources with 160 mostly underprivileged Lower East Side students infuriated the parents and teacher of the earlier chosen site, and thus the idea was dropped. Now, the Ross Global Academy will be housed two floors below the office of the Chancellor of the city's Education Department, Joel I. Klein.

Ross Global Academy Charter School is a public school, which operates under the charter system that is increasingly popular across the United States. A charter school, by definition, is a publicly funded school that, in accordance with state statutes, has been granted a charter exempting it from state or local rules and regulations. It is governed by a group or organization, which has formed a contract, or charter, with the state housing the school. Also, as a public institution, the enrollment is free, as long as the student meets the rigorous application standards, and if more students apply than there are spaces available, a lottery is created to assist in choosing the pupils.

In return for this public funding, while

PLANS FOR GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH SCALED DOWN

By T.J. Clemente

Progress has been made by the Greek Orthodox Church of the Hamptons and its representatives concerning revised site plans for the construction of a new church in Southampton adjacent to the present church. The site is located on the corner of St. Andrews Road and Nicholas Court in Shinnecock Hills.

It was reported that Town of Southampton Planning Board Chairman Dennis Finnerty praised the revisions of the project. The revised plan is to build a new 7500 sq. ft. church and convert the old structure into a 15,500 sq ft community and cultural center. The once proposed sixty-five foot Byzantine dome on the new church has been scaled back to sixty feet. Father Alex Karloutsos is very pleased. He believes that the dome and the space within is an expression of the vastness of divinity. In the last eight years he has watched Sunday school attendance increase from seven to eighty-five children. This statistic is a true measure of how healthy the parish is growing and the need for more "sacred space" to worship and teach. He is very grateful for the understanding town officials have of this need.

Gilberto Lopez, church designer and church builder, believes that all concerns of the town will be addressed, successfully balancing the needs of the town and church. He has addressed the parking, traffic and buffering issue concerning the site's 3.8-acre size. One way of addressing the issues was his concept of a one-way drive off St. Andrews Road. This will also reduce an "asphalt presence." By moving the construction farther east there will be more of a buffer from the properties to the west. The length of the new cultural center has also been reduced by about twelve feet. The parking capacity was increased to 96 with land parking available for an addition 47 cars. On

Who's Here

Gael Greene
Writer

By Joan Zandell

We thought it would be fun to meet for dinner. We decided to eat at Pierre's Restaurant in Bridgehampton on Friday, the day before Bastille Day. We arrived promptly at eight o'clock, and the house was packed. Looking over my right shoulder, I noticed that the table I had reserved was taken. I said hello to Pierre, followed by air-kisses on both cheeks. "Bonsoir!"

Pierre looked at the reservation book, and looked up. We looked at one another. "I made a mistake," he said, "I put you in for tomorrow night." And without missing a beat, he grabbed two menus, turned on his heel, and in his best French accent said, "Follow me!" We were led into the back room next to the library, in what Gael Greene would have certainly termed, Siberia.

Pierre walked ahead followed by Gael Greene, the Queen of Restaurant Critics, who rose to the occasion by ignoring the entire interaction. I trailed behind them both, and we were seated.

Pierre turned, smiled, then shrugged and said, "I thought you were coming tomorrow," as charmingly as if he'd just said, "You're the two most beautiful women in the room." I didn't know how to respond. After all, there was nothing I could do. Every table in the front was taken. I couldn't exactly run over to my table and drag the unsuspecting diners out into the street. And then, the writer part of me thought, 'what an interesting turn of events.'

At first glance, Gael Greene is as tall as her reputation, elegant and blond. She is gracious. And yet there is a certain je ne sais quoi, did I perceive a cultivated aloofness? She sat in and I sat out. Gazing at the room's reflection in the strip of mirror behind her head, I could see, and was reminded all evening long, of "the other" room. Ms. Greene did not let on that anything might be even remotely amiss.

After examining the menus, we both decided on the three-course prix fix, which we agreed was good value for the money. Cold potato leek soup to start, followed by an appetizer of tuna tartar (not part of the prix fixe), half a roast chicken with mashed potatoes and ratatouille as the main course, and we would share a freshly baked tart tatin with vanilla ice cream and a raspberry tart made with almond paste, for dessert. Ms. Greene chose the red wine of course, and we toasted to the success of her new book, "Insatiable."

"Insatiable" is a very entertaining read. It is a playful and intelligent romp through a power loving, celebrity craving, hedonistic, sensualist's life. Ms. Greene is no apologist. On the contrary, she has lived her life with great passion and gusto, and would do it over again in a heartbeat. A woman of enormous appetites of all kinds, the book states quite candidly how she satisfies them, grows hungry again, satisfies them again, and the cycle repeats, while we, the voyeurs, stand back and watch.

Many who will read the book, will read it for the sex and the naming of names. For those scandal junkies, the magnificent descriptions of endlessly memorable meals will be an added plus. For more serious foodies, the author's libidinous forays may entice or they may shock. (Just try to remember it WAS the freewheeling 70s.) And guys can relax because Ms. Greene does not categorize or judge the sexual performances of her lovers. She simply describes the experiences. And whether or not food was involved. Which it always is. "When I write about sex," says the author, "I want men to experience what sex is like for a woman."

The empty soup plates are removed and we raise our forks to start in on the tuna tartar that has frizzled leeks on top and a small salad on the side. I pass the freshly baked bread, but she declines. I can't imagine the tartar without it. I lift my fork again in anticipation, but something stops me and I ask, "Who of your many lovers was the most memorable?" Ms. Greene looks me in the eye, smiles and says, "The most memorable is not necessarily the best." Suddenly I feel as if we are talking about a meal. She quietly thinks while she chews, "Elvis Presley was the most memorable." She pauses. "The best lover I ever had was the one I refer to in the book as the accountant."

The accountant is the book's mystery lover. He is the only man to be furnished with a fictitious name and a fictitious profession. Now, what would make a journalist so hell-bent on telling the truth that she would drive away sexy Burt Reynolds (as the result of an article in Cosmopolitan magazine) but would protect the anonymity of a lover? Good question. And one to which there is no answer for the present moment.

Anonymous is as anonymous does.

She asks whether the namesake of the restaurant is single. I respond that he is. "He must like it that way," she says. The wine starts to loosen us up. There are several moments when sitting there with Ms. Greene feels like we've known one another forever, like we're old friends exchanging perceptions about life, interwoven with remarks about the food. We taste, we sip, we savor, we return to the subject at hand.

"Nowadays," says Ms. Greene, "everybody's a food critic. There is so much unbelievable food to be had in the world. When I started writing for New York Magazine, there was only conservative French food. When a chef in New York started doing something new, it was news, it was a revelation. And we'd all go running over to his restaurant to sample what he was up to."

In preparation for this meeting, I found myself reading Insatiable in bed. I don't share this fact with the book's author but I do mention that the more I read, the hungrier I became. As I made headway through the escapades of the sixties and seventies, I discovered I needed to take meal breaks. I couldn't decide whether to eat the goose mousse with black truffles (pate de foie gras) on delicate wafers, or hearty crackers?

One afternoon half way through the book, I suddenly developed an unbearable longing for a freshly baked baguette slathered in sweet Danish butter complemented by an exotic, smelly French cheese and a glass of red wine. I got in my car and headed for a cheese shop.

On the way home from the market, almost mystically, I drifted into the French wine section of a liquor store. (I was once told that the correct way to eat foie gras was accompanied by a chilled glass of Sauterne. Alas, plebian that I am, I prefer red.)

My justification for this foray into culinary bliss while reading in bed was sanctioned by my need to have the full "Gael experience" as part of my research. I noticed that I felt happier than I had in months. I was reconnecting with the sensualist within. Even my cats benefited from my gastronomic research; I shared whatever I ate with them. One day I found them lounging ecstatically; Sophie was draped opulently around a silk pillow, while Max stretched out to his entire length on his back, across a freshly washed, cotton duvet cover. Naps all around followed.

So sitting here at Pierre's I felt I had prepared for this meeting. I had "Gaeled" myself sufficiently to get a sense of who the woman sitting across from me was. But I am also capable of occasional doubt. There were moments when I felt like Faye Dunaway in Chinatown. Gael is a legend. Gael is a woman. Gael is a legend. Gael is a human being.

Lest we think that she is merely a hedonistic sensualist only concerned with satisfying her own cravings, Gael Greene happens to be the kind hearted human being behind "Citymeals-on-Wheels," a significant not-for-profit that feeds countless numbers of elderly in New York City. It is an organization with which Ms. Greene is still very much involved today. Thanks to her vision, top notch restaurants all over New York have the privilege of feeding elderly shut-ins who do not have enough money to feed themselves. Ms. Greene confides, "It is the one accomplishment of which I feel the proudest."

The evening slowly draws to its conclusion. We taste the tatin, we nibble on the raspberry tart. Pierre stops by the table to see whether we've enjoyed the food. When the check arrives, it is minus the appetizer; his gift to us. We step out into a night sky filled with stars, and breathe deeply. The air is pure and clear. Next door, the Hampton Library touts its Fridays at Five series on a sign. It's where Gael Greene is scheduled to read from her latest book. Two hours of sex, power, and food? I wouldn't miss it if I were you! Besides, for the gastronomes and the hungry (metaphorical or otherwise), the library serves wine and great hors d'oeuvres.

Restaurant critic Gael Greene will appear at the Hampton Library this coming Friday at 5 p.m. She has written a juicy memoir entitled, Insatiable, in which she discusses both the culinary as well as the carnal in her usual orgasmic prose. Her presence at the library promises to be standing room only.

existing property.

However, the owner of the Gingerbread House, next door, objected to the plans, as did the Sag Harbor Historic Society. After several hearings at which criticisms were raised, Mr. Gruen agreed to alter the project. In the winter of 2004, he reduced the size to 5,000 square feet. Then, at a subsequent Planning Board meeting, the opponents' attorney raised the specter of a SEQRA review — a cumbersome and expensive environmental review under New York State law. As Mr. Gruen was advised that SEQRA does not apply to properties of 4,000 square feet or less, and again so as to address neighbor concerns, he once more reduced the size of the project, in early 2005, to 4,000 square feet, eliminating the third floor and two apartments.

Mr. Gruen explained that the smaller structure is intended to address, among other things, concerns that relate specifically to the Gingerbread House. For example, he agreed to add a 15-foot set-back from the sidewalk, and adopted architectural changes intended to allow more light and air to reach the Gingerbread House. He also offered to plant trees or hedges in between the two properties. Separately from the Gingerbread House issues, Mr. Gruen observed that his plans provide for a wider sidewalk, as well as better access to the structure for people with disabilities. The rendering above reflects the 4,000 square-foot project.

But by the time these plans were submitted, the furor had taken on a life of its own. In 2005, the Sag Harbor Village declared a temporary building moratorium, during which new, would mean it is an article for the front of the book, but it should be shorter than a regular article.

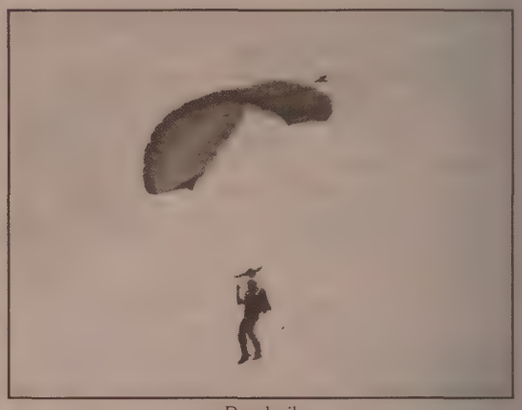
Then we have "First Lead," "Second Lead," "Third Lead" and so forth and so on, so we can differentiate between leads. I might say "I've changed the head on the third lead." This means I wrote it a new headline.

Then we have "lefts." Lefts are on the left hand pages, which are the less important pages than the right hand pages, as far as editorial goes.

Lefts can be reviews or previews. Or less important stories.

"Put this photo in the pull-quote," means that instead of putting an excerpt of a story in large type in the central box on the bottom of the lead, which we would call a pull- quote, we would pass on that, and instead put a photo there.



Daredevil

Here are other things that get shouted about in the editorial department.

"Do we have a jpeg?" Not the versions in the playground. The kind that gets taken by a camera.

"Do we have a Daredevil?" Sometimes reporters go out risking their lives to do an article. A parachute jump. A visit inside a shark tank.

"Did the Gelber get in?" Bob Gelber has been writing about Classic Cars for fifteen years every week. Or now every other week.

"What's for dinner?" This actually means, right here in the middle of a busy newspaper office, exactly what it says. Every Tuesday, the company treats all the employees for dinner. It's nothing fancy. Pizza or Chinese or Heroes or fried chicken. But it also includes cold drinks, coffee and dessert. We have condiments, paper plates and plastic utensils and cups. And sometimes, we get a restaurant that brings us over chicken cordon bleu. Or sliced steak in wine sauce. What's for dinner is a serious question.

And by the way, it's always fun to see employees whose work day has ended earlier than dinner time, showing up to see how the closing is going.

One of my very favorite DanTalk things to say is "I'm going off writing at the Beach." That's where I write. On a laptop. Sitting on a folding chair. This article, today, I am writing at Peter's Pond Beach, in front of Rennert's.

Most anyone local can tell you where that is. •

TWENTYSOMETHING... By David Lion Rattiner

Weekend In Montauk

Why is it that when you put on sunblock that is over thirty, it doesn't rub in? It makes no sense. I was at Ditch Plains last Saturday to get in some much needed longboarding when it hit me how annoying it is to put sunblock on. I had just purchased some SPF 50 Banana Boat Sunblock and whipped it out after lying down my towel. Everything was perfect. I had my surfboard, a nice sized towel, an FHM magazine and some sunblock. It was a completely clear day and the waves were showing some promise as many classic Montauk surfer dudes and dudettes were longboarding the day away.

This past year, I have upgraded my sunblock purchases from SPF 15 to SPF 50. I used to get the 15 in order to have a little bit of color happening on my skin. The entire reason I did this was because I thought it would get me more attention from girls.

Now I can assure you — if you are a guy reading this, read carefully — tans do nothing for you. All they do is give you skin cancer and that is it. I have never once in my tanned skinned life had a woman speak to me because she thought I had a good tan. So I have moved on. I am a pale skinned man, enjoying a pale skinned life.

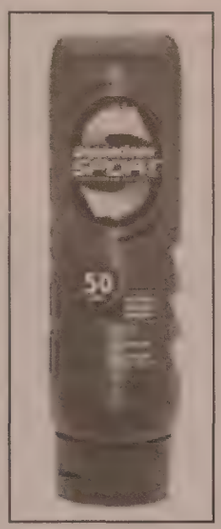
But now I have to deal with this SPF 50 garbage. Putting this stuff on your skin is like trying to rub in Elmer's glue. It is so thick and sticky and impossible to rub in. How can this be? Why does the 15 rub in with such ease and the 50 turn you into the ghost from Christmas past? It looked like I was putting zinc oxide all over my body.

I felt like a complete idiot with all of this white sunblock all over me. Why wasn't this crap rubbing in? My friend Janine looked at me like I was the biggest idiot on the planet. "Dave, you look ridiculous."

You can't win in this world. If I don't put on sunblock then I will surely die. If I do put on sunblock I look like the idiot that put too much sunblock on.

This all brings me back to my earlier point about how tans don't do anything for you. I think that I have figured out why guys go for tans now. It has nothing to do with actually getting a tan. It is simply a byproduct of avoiding looking like a complete moron on the beach.

Montauk, by the way, is insanely gorgeous and if you get the opportunity to head out there you really should. It is just so unbelievably nice there. It really is. Go there for lunch, a hike, a beach day, a fishing day or some dinner. It is pretty tough to beat.



I decided to jump into the water to get the block off, but was unsuccessful. I marched into the water, but the block was waterproof. I felt like I was swimming in motor oil. I was all slimy and slippery.

I walked out of the ocean back to my little slice of heaven on the beach. My towel now had sunblock all over it. There was sunblock in my hair, in my eyes and all over my trunks. My eyeballs were stinging. This beach day was turning into a stressful event. I started toweling off the sunblock. My entire towel was turning white. I felt like I was in a real life version of Dr. Seuss's The Cat in The Hat.

So much of my thinking revolves around what the opposite sex will think of me it is pathetic. I was debating between death or not looking cool on the beach and I was choosing death.

I started to think about how lucky I am to be having such a problem. After all, enjoying the beaches in Montauk is a privilege. Things could be worse. I fell asleep on the beach and woke up with a sunburn.

Sunblock is so annoying.

to a symposium at Harvard. I pitched the idea to magazine editors. Everyone turned me down. Two days before the symposium, a magazine editor changed her mind. I attended three days of talks, they were well organized, there were great speakers. I got so excited about what I'd learned that I started writing the article on the steering wheel of the car as I drove home. It became a cover story and then an alum approached me to do a book. While I was writing the book my son would ask me, 'Do you think anyone will read this?' And I would say, 'I don't know.' Longitude got rave reviews in the New York Times, got on the bestseller list and became a movie. The book received 13 rejections from British publishers. It did finally make it to number one on the London Times bestseller list, and Harrison became a household word. This year, Prince Philip unveiled a memorial for Harrison at Westminster Abbey."

Will Dava Sobel make scientists into rock stars? Well, stars is the operative word. One can only imagine what will happen when Ms. Sobel's present project, a play about Copernicus, hits Broadway.

ed predicting equipment at the National Weather Center in Atlanta will predict that the course of this new unnamed storm will take it to a landfall at Southampton, New York sometime over the American Labor Day weekend and that town is ordered to immediately evacuate. But this new storm fizzles out. And that is that. Calm seas will prevail in the Hamptons on Monday. On Tuesday, rain will come to the Hamptons from the Canadian Rockies bringing with it hailstones and snow flurries. The Montauk Highway will briefly close so snowplows can sweep up this slushy material. Snowball fights will ensue.

Friday August 26 to Thursday September 1.

No hurricanes will be detected over the Atlantic on the first few days of this week, but the National Weather Service will issue a bulletin to the Hamptons saying this is just a false lull in the proceedings and to expect more hurricanes any day now, until hurricane season ends September 30.

On Wednesday August 31, a new hurricane will begin to form in the Atlantic just South of Bermuda with 60 mile per hour winds and it will pass over that Island laying a long strip of much needed sand in front of the Princess Hotel with no damage caused and just a few trees down, but then on Thursday September 1, it will reverse course and experience increasing winds up to 90 miles an hour as it passes over Bermuda a second time, this time laying sand on the beach at Cobble Cove Hotel on the North Coast. It will be rated a Category 1 and given the name Hurricane Falafel.

Friday September 2 to Thursday September 8.

Friday, the predicted path of Hurricane Falafel, now a Category 2, is shown on computer models to be headed for Shinnecock, New York, and an evacuation of Shinnecock, Hampton Bays and downtown Southampton is ordered. Weather in the Hamptons on this day will be partly cloudy and breezy with a 15% chance of rain.

On Saturday night at 11 p.m., Hurricane Falafel will clip the uninhabited Outer Banks key of North Carolina, causing no damage.

Hurricane Falafel will lose speed and intensity on Sunday after its encounter with the Outer Banks, and will alter course slightly. It will also be downgraded to a Category 2. Additional evacuations are ordered for Westhampton Beach, Mastic and the Moriches. Sunny in the Hamptons with high humidity and 20% chance of rain.

Hurricane Falafel will cross the Delmarva Peninsula just south of Delaware on Tuesday September 6, and still losing speed, will go 140 miles to the east of Asbury Park, New Jersey before circling back and hitting New York City. High tides two feet above normal in the Hamptons.

Hurricane Falafel will make landfall and peter out on Thursday at Coney Island, Brooklyn. Damage will be confined to the Beach Drive Bumper Car Ride just to the north of the boardwalk at Avenue M where two of the sixteen bumper cars will have their electricity shorted out for half an hour.

Friday September 9 to Thursday September 15

Overcast and windy in the Hamptons from Friday to Monday. Peak gusts at twenty-two knots. One hurricane is seen to be forming off Yucatan, Mexico on Saturday, a second hurricane is forming up south of Jamaica on Sunday and a third is gathering strength and moving westward from Madeira, Portugal off the coast of Morocco. A hurricane alert is posted at noon Monday from Sandy Hook, New Jersey and all the way up the coast to Boston. Most probable landfall is expected somewhere on the south coast of Long Island, possibly Fire Island.

On Wednesday, the three hurricanes that are now headed toward one another, receive the names Golly, Holly and Jolly. All are Category 2. On the same day, a Hurricane begins to take shape off the coast of Andros in the Bahama Islands and it receives the name Izzie. The weather for the rest of the week in the Hamptons will be very humid and warm with highs in the low 90s.

Friday September 17 to Thursday September 23.

On Friday, the National Weather Service renames Dora to Dizzy, and its merged name to Charlie-Dizzy. Dora will be used next year.

On Sunday, Hurricanes Holly, Golly and Jolly, now called HollyGollyJolly, will merge into one giant hurricane 400 miles south of Montauk, Long Island with winds at 170 miles an hour at Category Four. Landfall is projected to be at Cameron Beach in Bridgehampton sometime on Wednesday between 1 and 2 a.m. High tides will be nine feet above normal. The National Weather Service on Monday midnight orders all Bridgehampton evacuated beginning at 8 a.m. Monday morning.

A sudden, unexpected high pressure area moving in from Ohio on Monday afternoon will alter the course of Hurricane HollyGollyJolly to the east and cause it to swing safely out to the east of Cape Cod, Massachusetts on Wednesday afternoon, September 22.

The best waves for surfing ever seen on the East Coast will be at Ditch Plains Beach in Montauk on Wednesday and Thursday.

Friday September 24 to Thursday October 2

The National Weather Center closes the 2006 Hurricane Season in the Hamptons on Monday September 27, one day early, due to budgetary cutbacks. There will be no hurricanes after that date.

Friday October 3 to Thursday October 9

A small hurricane forms up north of the Canary Islands in the north Atlantic and charges east toward Montauk. But the National Weather Service says the Hurricane Season is over and it is too late, so the hurricane goes back to the Canaries and turns into a deep grey damp fog. •

Tuesday. This was how they responded.

The day after the assault, a boy from the reservation named David Brown was severely beaten by some other boys on the reservation. He had been an invited guest at the birthday party on Tuesday. He was now conducting his own investigation about what his schoolmates had done. This was the response to that.

On Monday evening, a meeting was held at the Southampton Elementary School gymnasium at the request of the parents of the victims with the Village Mayor and Police Chief present. The Mayor, the Police Chief and several Police officers were present. Also members of the Shinnecock reservation. There was an open mike.

Some of the mothers of the victims at this meeting pressed a case that this assault should be turned over to the FBI as a racial incident. They said the attack was premeditated, which it certainly seems to have been since they had come to the house as a group with bad intentions in mind, and it was said those that came all wore black clothes and mustered before the event at the North Sea Community House. Others said this was not the case.

Others who spoke at this meeting said that the alcohol flowed freely at this party and kids as young as 14 were there. Where were the parental controls?

This is a very serious matter for this community. And also for the high school.

Obviously, the police can question anyone they want. If they want to go on the reservation, they will. There is nothing to prevent them from making arrests of those who violate the law there.

Whether this incident should be turned over to the FBI for investigation as a racial event should not be done lightly. Such an investigation might make matters worse between the various groups in this community. It could also result in high school kids being sent to a penitentiary for many years.

In any case, there is little doubt that those who were involved in this assault should be brought to justice. There also needs to be increased police presence until cooler heads prevail. But there is no need to let this spin way out of control. We do not live in a police state.

There are education courses available that can successfully bring people with different backgrounds who live in the same community to a place where they can understand and be appreciative of one another. The kids all go to the same school. These courses ought to be given, with mandatory attendance, as soon as possible. • soon cool? Would they all just grow old? How long could they continue?

The stepfather of the young elf, a member of the Royal Guard, stepped forward one day and spoke to the architect to tell him that the wooing was inappropriate and should end.

The Architect agreed with the guardsman. And he let the elf out of his employ. But the wooing continued. Ah yes, it continued.

Then this Royal Guardsmen approached the Princess herself at a high school graduation ceremony where she was the guest of honor, and she listened carefully and said it could not be true. Could it? She talked to him again later. And then, still later, when she finally learned the truth, she told her Architect that she and he would have to be separated. It was her castle. He would have to move out. He left.

The elf, having now wondered what she had got herself into, told the Architect she didn't want to see him anymore. He was crushed. He left her notes on her Nissan. She moved out of generosity of others, we must remember that at the root of these social events, sponsored by the likes of Citigroup and the Island of Barbados, is the sport. There are top class athletes and some of the greatest equine specimens in the world a hundred yards from where we sip champagne.

The Bridgehampton Polo Club was founded in the 80s when Peter Brant and his childhood friend, Neil Hirsch, decided they wanted somewhere to play polo while at their summer homes. Brant, handicapped at 4, and Hirsch, with an A handicap (0), are still playing twenty years later. In fact, Neil's team, Black Watch, battled against Brant's White Birch in the Mercedes Benz championship match just last year and again three weeks later in the Butler Hampton Handicap.

They may not be the best on their respective teams, but they surround themselves with some of the most talented players in the world in order to compete in a game they both love. The higher the handicap, the better the player, the top players sit in a select group with a handicap of 10. Stacked on Black Watch is the face of polo and Ralph Lauren ambassador, Ignacio "Nacho" Figueras, at a 7 handicap, only superseded by Facundo Pieres at a 9. The total handicap of the team must reach 19 in order to be considered high-goal polo, so along side ringers like these two, which account for 16 of the 19 goals, the other two players must be lower in ranking.

Peter Brant and his wife, Stephanie Seymour

The same goes for the three other teams competing for the coveted prize. Equuleus, which did not participate last year, had a great showing in 2004; Northwood, anchored by Argentine Open Champion Lucas Monteverde also stands a chance; and Two Trees can hold its own with 9-goaler Lucas Criado.

With high-goal polo comes great perks. Aside from their pay, which is handsome, for almost two months of the summer the teams are given houses, cars, phones, and all the trimmings in order to keep them comfortable during their stay in the Hamptons.

In lower goal polo, horses are bought for $10-$15,000 or even just rented, but for high-goal, the price of a good horse can be over $100,000. And each player is going to need at least six of them. There is also tack, food, shelter, trainers, groomers, etc. A patron can spend over a $1,000,000 a year maintaining a team, but in the overall field of sports, this doesn't seem like that huge an output. After all, the Yankees shell out over $200,000,000 a year. The major difference is the Bronx Bombers bring in a billion dollars, while it is unheard of for a patron to make a dime. In fact, all the money collected at the Mercedes Benz Challenge goes to the South Fork Breast Cancer Coalition.

This Saturday, while sipping on gratis Gold Peak, a new iced tea (and event sponsor), and giving Brooke Shields a wave as she makes her way around the pitch in a convertible, remember all the money someone else put into your little soirée. Note that you are a guest, that you are there to watch the match, to cheer on someone other than your friend trying to get celebrity phone numbers, and remember, if you've got a million dollars, you too can be a polo patron, but only for a year. After that, it's back to the VIP tent for freebees.

Lower Mortgage Payments by 45%

With Sophisticated Jumbo Loan Program

NY - Mortgages for multi million dollar homes is typically limited to 50% financing, carries a higher rate and requires full income verification.

A scarcely known loan is available for home purchases and refinances that offers up to 90% financing, cuts monthly payments by as much as 45% and requires no income verification. Additionally there are enhanced tax and pre-payment advantages with increased cash flow not available with other mortgages.

Many wonder why they haven't been informed about this unique loan. One reason is this loan does not profit lenders in the same way other loans do so they're not easy to find. The company sponsoring these programs, North Atlantic Mortgage Corp., has made a Free report "Sophisticated Jumbo Financing" available. This report also addresses many other unique types of mortgages, credit issues, and most importantly how to get a great Jumbo loan with no income or asset verification.

If you are self-employed, professional or high-income individual, there are many other savvy "secrets" and various loan options that you probably aren't aware that exist.

Simply call 1-877-794-5363 to request this informative free report.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #407
Some of a Beach

I drive to and from Ram Island for a job I have there. I love stopping at different spots along Ram Island Drive, the thin strip of beach/land that connects Ram Island to the mainland (Shelter Island). I love to walk the tiny beaches and poke into the little secluded alcoves to see what's there.

One time I found a man's wallet. It was so dried from the sun that when I opened it, it broke apart. There was a driver's license in the little window part, but it wasn't legible. There were two MasterCards but neither had any holograms on the front or magnetic strips on the back, so I think they dated back to the eighties at least. Plus, neither card worked when I tried to use them...

Once I found a bathing suit top. It had yellow polka dots, but was neither itsy bitsy, nor teeny weeny. There were some old beer bottles in the vicinity and a faded torn playing card. I don't know how many times I have to say it. Gals, do not play strip poker unless you have taken the time to stack the deck. And remember, as soon as you lose your top, you've won, so switch the game to money bets. He'll be completely distracted by the topless you, and you can clean him out before he sobers up. Not that I would know anything about that....it's just what I've heard from some bad girls...rich, but bad...

On one excursion I found an AAA map of Wyoming! Boy, I thought I was bad at navigation!

"Margaret, this don't look like where the buffalo roam. Let me see that map."

"Bill, I been wrangling three kids in this car and trying to read that map at the same time, so don't blame me if we made a wrong turn."

"Shoulda made a left at the Mississippi. Damn, I had a feeling we was off course back then. But how could you mistake east and west, Margaret?"

"Is that how you're supposed to hold the map, Bill? With the 'N' at the top?"

There's platforms for osprey nests on nearly every phone pole along the drive. A few months ago, I was waiting for a fire truck to back out of a driveway. The driver hit the phone pole behind him with such force, it shot the nest off the platform like a flying UFO. I could only imagine some poor osprey returning home later.

"Where's the house, George?"

"I dunno. I built it right here. Platform 6, that's us."

"Well, it's not here now. Where did it go? Maybe it just flew away all by itself. You know, these eggs are due in a few days, I shouldn't be having this stress right now..."

There's one set of osprey I always stop and observe. One is usually in the nest and the other is standing on the next pole. I know those nests are big enough for two birds so I don't know why there's always one bird standing alone. Is he on guard? Did they have a big fight? Is he setting a record for pole standing? Maybe he has claustrophobia? Whatever it is, he is faithfully atop that pole.

If you beach comb, you can't resist collecting beach glass. I love to look at it and wonder what it was. Where did it come from? How long has it been in the water, where has it traveled? I like to think it came from a wine bottle in Venice, or a glass from the Riviera, someplace romantic and far away. But I concede it probably fell off a party boat in Greenport.

My most curious find was a plastic Halloween pumpkin. Odd place for a plastic pumpkin, no houses in the immediate area. Then I realized... it was a beach bucket. I always kept beach toys — or anything that could be used as a beach toy — in the car when my kids were small. A Halloween pumpkin's summer job is to be a beach bucket! And can a real beach bucket double as a candy bucket for Halloween? Why not? So what if the candy smells like bait, it gives it that unique Island flavor.

Beachcombing is fun and free — how many things still are? Beaches are usually located right next to the water, so convenient for a cool down dip. The only good part of that stupid movie, Forrest Lump, was the advertisement..."Life is like a beach. You just never know what you're gonna git..."

"Cook Out"

VIPs including Kelly Ripa, Mark Consuelos and Kelsey Grammer attended The 6th Annual House & Garden's Designer Showcase which previewed this past Saturday in Bridgehampton. Christie Brinkley's now estranged husband, Peter Cook, was the architect for this year's estate. A tanned Cook arrived at the event with four men, no Christie in sight. It may be the last time we see Cook out and about in the Hamptons for a while, ever since his affair with 19-year-old made front page news. Close friends of the couple say, "Christie is completely devastated," and if they have to be forced to pick sides, Cook is out. The must see Designer Showcase is open to the public through August 27th. You can go to www.hamptondesignershowhouse for ticket information.

Gossip sure travels fast out East. I interviewed the Society columnist and PR guru, R. Couri Hay this past Saturday morning for entrepreneur extraordinaire, Rob Florio's Mainstreet series, which streams 24/7 on his web-site, Hamptons.com. During the extensive interview, we touched upon the shocking Brinkley-Cook separation, and Couri would only insinuate that there was a much bigger story about to make headlines. I predicted Cook was the one who may have gone astray, and Couri said, "I can't reveal the "entire" story just yet." This was all before Cook's affair had hit the headlines Sunday morning. Later that same evening at Star Room, I bumped into Couri at Beth Ostrosky's Birthday Bash, where VIPs including Beth's man, Howard Stern, Russell Simmons, James Lipton, Rosanna and daughter Jenna Scotto, were all helping the birthday beauty celebrate. R. Couri Hay, who is a friend of Peter Cook's, revealed, "Peter Cook has been sleeping with his 19-year-old assistant, Ms. Bianchi. The Christie Brinkley divorce was caused by a 19-year-old that he met in a toy store. They started the affair a year ago. He moved her out of the toy store. He hired her as his assistant. Meanwhile, her step-father is a cop in Southampton. Three days ago, before the news broke, the cop allegedly walked up to Brinkley and Cook and said, "Stop dating my daughter! If it wasn't for my job and my pension you'd be dead now." Bianchi's lawyers say Cook openly talked to Bianchi about "wanting to leave" Brinkley, who remains absolutely stunning at age 52.

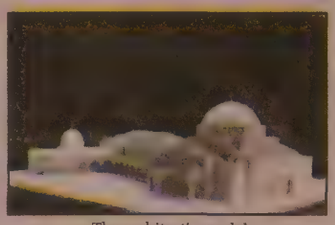
On a happier love note, friends and family gathered at the Pink Elephant to ooh and ahh at Angelina Anisimova's blinding 10-carat rock that she acquired this past Friday, when Sir Ryan Freedman asked her to marry him and she said, "Yes!" PE owner David and wife, Renee Sarner and Janice Dickenson partied alongside the twenty-something couple, who met in the Hamptons. Angelina exclaimed, special events attendance has grown to include 500 worshippers.

Father Alex is very excited about the fact the church is inclusive, a sort of a Pan-Orthodox Community. He plans on calling the new church "Heaven on Earth." The growth of the Orthodox community follows the same trend of growth on the East End of Long Island with many more people living all year round and raising their families in this vibrant region.



The architect's model

Although the proposed site improvements have been an ongoing project for years, Mr. Lopez feels that an end is in sight with the project starting within the next year. He is proud that his brother, Edmundo Lopez, was the principal architect and he will be able to build a church that will be worthy of the Southampton community. Both Father Alex and Mr. Lopez anticipate that many people will come just to view the new church and its artwork because of its beauty and majesty. Father Alex also believes that the new church will add to the energy within the parish which already has seen the number of altar boys grow from one eight years ago, to 22 today.

Both Father Alex and Mr. Lopez have some church building in their past. Father Alex mentioned how proud he was of the role he played in building the Orthodox Church at Camp David, Maryland on the Presidential retreat there. Gilberto Lopez, a convert to the Greek Orthodox faith, built his first church in Greece while studying to convert. Both are family men and understand the importance of the relationship and role the church plays preparing children for adulthood.

Father Karloutsos repeated what was reported by saying again that he was grateful to the town for realizing the compromises that the church made and that he is sure that the new church will "complement the Town of Southampton and will be one of the most beautiful structures in all of the Hamptons-open to everyone. We are not an exclusionary congregation." Mr. Lopez added. "The church is going to very beautiful and special."

The church has a website with a tremendous amount of information and photos of church activities. It iswww.kimisishamptons.ny.goarch.org.

the area, to the nearby Kingdom of Bensonhurst, where she moved in with her sister. Still the notes appeared on her Nissan. And there were e-mails and phone calls, and she decided she wouldn't answer any of them anymore. And she didn't.

Last week, this beautiful elf found her picture on the front page of the New York Post above the screaming headline CHRISTIE'S HUBBY LOLITA BARES ALL. She didn't bare all, actually. She spoke about what had happened, thereby metaphysically baring all. And she did it again later that day on Fox 5, the TV Station owned by the wealthiest merchant in the Kingdom, Sir Rupert Murdoch, who also owns the Post. She was Diana Bianchi, SHS Class of 05, she said. And she wished none of this had ever happened.

She had heard after it began, from the other elves, that she was not the only one he was pursuing. But she was young and foolish, she said, and what did she know? But now, it was over and she wouldn't be doing that again. And no, he never had said he would leave the Princess. It was what it was. And now, at 19, she knew better.

beautifully appointed inside. Captain's chairs, wet bar, thick carpets, passengers facing one another."

So why not chopper to the Hamptons? There's a whole lot of people in New York City that make $10 million a year. And they all put their pants on one leg at a time just like everybody else. But the money is there. Why not use it to get the best?

On a typical Friday in the summertime, Liberty Helicopter makes between thirty and thirty five runs out to the Hamptons. They have thirteen aircraft. So each aircraft averages about three runs every Friday. The same thing happens in reverse on Sunday.

The A-Star cruises at about 130 miles an hour and so makes the trip to the Hamptons in about forty-five minutes. The Dauphin, with its twin engines, goes faster. It can get out there in just half an hour.

In recent years, as more and more people from the City begin to call their Hamptons homes their primary residence, a good sized business has developed during the spring and the fall.

"It used to be we had only a few trips out per week to the Hamptons in the shoulder season," Day said. "Now we run as many as ten trips out on a weekend right through October, November and December. And the same thing happens in the spring."

Liberty Helicopter was founded with one Eurostar helicopter in 1984 by Patrick's father Pat Day Sr., and his partner Drew Schaefer. The firm operates out of Linden Airport in Linden, New Jersey, where their equipment is serviced and maintained. Tom Yessman is the President. Pat Day Sr., who recently retired, had been a pilot in the Coast Guard for many years as part of one of their Sea Rescue Units. Drew Schaefer today remains the owner of the Company.

Who flies out on Liberty?

"Any famous person you can think of uses our service. Princess Fergie is a regular customer. So is Sarah Jessica Parker. P. Diddy. Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt take Liberty. We were hired for the Kerry Campaign for the duration. We've choppered out George Bush Sr. and Jeb Bush. The Clintons use us. So does Bon Jovi, Bruce Willis, Gwyneth Paltrow and David Lee Roth. And, of course, a whole lot of Wall Street. About $26 billion in bonuses was given out on Wall Street last year. Some of it was spent chartering Liberty Helicopters."

I did mention that there were three convenient locations in Manhattan to charter Liberty. They are Wall Street at Pier Six, West 30th Street at Twelfth Avenue, and on the East Side at East 34th Street on the East River. Many people sit and have a drink to unwind and watch the view from the Water Club just a hundred yards from the helicopter before heading out. It's a tradition.

"People talk," Day said. "And they make deals. There are things that happen in helicopters we know before the tabloids know. But we respect our customers' privacy."

"So what happens in the helicopter stays in the helicopter," I said.

Day laughed. "You could say that," he said.

You can even take a helicopter ride WITHOUT coming to the Hamptons. Although the Hampton charters are a big part of Liberty's business, another big part is the sightseeing business in and around New York City. People want to see the sights. And Liberty also does charters all up and down the Northeast corridor from Boston to Washington.

Can you get just one seat on a helicopter? For the most part, no. Chartering a ride is a private matter. You charter a chopper and then tell them the names of who will be on board.

"But we do sometimes put people together," Day said.

And what happens in the helicopter stays in the helicopter. • stricter zoning rules were adopted — although pending applications would be grandfathered. The Village also considered buying 127 Main Street from Denop, but a deal was not reached. Mr. Gruen heard that the Village would have turned the property into a youth center, something he believes would be less consistent with the neighborhood's character than his proposed use.

Once the moratorium was ended, hearings recommenced. Mr. Gruen retained consultants to provide a lengthy and detailed analysis of the revised plans, comparing the proposed property to other commercial properties in the village from size and aesthetics perspectives, and also addressing a variety of environmental issues. The opponents responded with what Mr. Gruen calls numerous factual inaccuracies, which were then addressed in yet another submission by his consultants. As examples of objections that Mr. Gruen describes as counter-factual:

— The opponents claimed that the proposed parking design would not leave sufficient space for vehicles to turn around. Mr. Gruen retained an environmental consultant to conduct a study. That study concluded that the parking design is safe. Mr. Gruen says that the opponents have not submitted their own study, yet they continue to claim that the parking design will be unsafe.

— Earlier, the opponents had expressed concern that the plans for a full basement would place the neighboring properties in danger during excavation and laying of foundation. To address this concern, Mr. Gruen agreed not to alter the footprint of the basement. Even so, the opponents claim that the amount of parking to be provided must be calculated based not only on the retail and living space above but also on the so-called basement. If that were true, Mr. Gruen says, virtually every commercial property in Sag Harbor is operating with illegally insufficient parking.

127 Main Street, Sag Harbor, today

In March 2006, Mr. Gruen was notified that the Planning Board will not consider the proposal until a SEQRA review is conducted. In response to that action, Denop has filed a lawsuit in Riverhead asserting that a SEQRA review is not applicable to structures of 4,000 square feet or less. If the Court agrees, the Planning Board will have to make a decision about the plans. All in all, Mr. Gruen has spent over $170,000 in legal and consulting fees.

Whatever the merits to the opposition at the outset, Mr. Gruen believes that the project as currently envisioned will be an asset to Sag Harbor. Indeed, he suspects that no one will even notice the new structure, as it will so well blend in with the surroundings. To him, the picture above is worth a thousand words, and he does not understand the current opposition after all of his concessions, other than perhaps an emotional attachment to the fight. His hope is that the project will eventually be decided on its merits and permitted to proceed as consistent with the zoning rules and neighborhood aesthetics.

named Barrister Tacopina, said Elf Diana had not yet decided if she would file a sexual harassment lawsuit, which he said was a classic of its kind. Who knew what the future held? Would Diana become a famous celebrity? Would she cut a record? Would she give endorsements? Who DID know after all?

The peasants of the Hamptons were all very sad at what had happened to their beautiful Princess. But she had remained above the fray, and they still treasured her and she was still their royalty. Love would find its way to her again, they said. As for the Architect, people shook their heads and whispered to one another again and again on the streets of East Hampton, Amagansett, Sag Harbor and Southampton.

"What an idiot," is what they said. •

maintaining autonomy, the charter school must meet state accountability standards and must have its charter reviewed every 3-5 years. The school's charter may be revoked if the state finds that guidelines have not been followed or standards have not been met. In short, the school can follow its own road while receiving public funding, but all roads must lead to success or the funding is revoked.

The road that the Ross Global Academy Charter School will follow is to prepare students for success in today's culturally and technologically infused 21st century. The school's mission statement reads: "By immersing young minds in a curriculum rich in cultural history, current world events, intercultural dialogue, and fluency in new technologies, the school prepares our students for global challenges by producing synthetic thinkers who can combine separate elements of knowledge to form a coherent perspective of the whole." With a heavy focus on the diverse culture of the students attending the school as well as the ever-changing world around us, Ross Global Academy aims to vary teaching styles in order to reach each student on an individual and lifelong level.

Despite this culturally rich emphasis of the program, the Ross Global Academy Charter School is still maintaining a core curriculum of math, literacy, science, and social studies. There will also be a K-12 Chinese language learning program- a trend that has become evident in more and more big cities in the United States. The school will also provide a wellness, health and nutrition program, arts, and a technology and media component. Class size will remain relatively small at 20 to 23 students and support programs will be in place for both English Language Learners and students with special learning needs. Stepping up a few notches from your average public school, the Ross Global Academy Charter School will lengthen its average school day to nearly 9 hours each day that school is in session from September on through the end of June. The school also plans to have mandatory attendance at Saturday and summer classes. Ross Global Academy plans to begin this September with kindergarten and grade 1, 5, and 6 classes.

This school sounds just like the rigorous and fast paced kick that our educational system needs. But there's a catch.

Being a public school, Ross Global Academy is at the mercy of the New York City Department of Education. It has become common practice over the years for the DOE to place new charter schools within the buildings of other existing public schools, for about two years, a time referred to as the school's "incubation period." It is during this time that the school begins to develop its curriculum, faculty, and student population. Eventually the school will outgrow the space allocated within the pre-existing public school and will be ready to venture out on its own. Following this practice, on April 26, 2006, the city's Department of Education assigned the Ross Global Academy nine classrooms and two offices at 111 Columbia Street. This building is already occupied by New Explorations into Science, Technology and Math (NEST+M) a charter school catering to gifted or accelerated students.

When NEST+M parents learned of this two-year sharing plan, many were outraged. They did not see the benefits of sharing their school of 730 gifted and talented children of mainly middle-class parents with a charter school aiming to provide underprivileged kids with a free first class education. The NEST Parent and Teacher Association has gone so far as to file a lawsuit against the New York State Board of Regents, demanding that the Ross charter be revoked. They have also filed suit against the DOE, insisting that the Ross Global Academy be placed somewhere not in their building. On June 23, 2006, Mayor Michael R. Bloomberg's administration announced that the Ross Global Academy Charter School will not be sharing a building with NEST+M. Apparently this is not the first time that the NEST+M school has countered an assignment of a new school within its walls. As a public school, the NEST+M school should understand the DOE decisions and accept that these are some of the compromises that come with being publicly funded. A two-year compromise doesn't sound so bad, when you think about those 160 Ross Global Academy students that will have their entire lives changed by this schooling opportunity.

Mrs. Ross requested this area of lower Manhattan partly in order to help underserved children, and partly to be near to NYU. The NYU Steinhardt School of Education is working in conjunction with the Ross Global Academy in a synergy of tutors, researchers, teachers, and learning experiences. With this advanced and enthusiastic team standing behind the school, and with 158 of the 160 spots eagerly filled by students from neighborhoods from Alphabet City to the Brooklyn Bridge, speaking English, Chinese, Spanish, or any one of a plethora of languages, the school is bound for an innovative and culturally rich educational experience. Mrs. Ross is bound and determined to provide for the underprivileged youth of New York City what her Ross School in East Hampton has already successfully provided for several youth of Long Island- a chance for an advanced and enriching lifetime of knowledge and experience.

In September the Ross Global Academy will open its doors, embracing its new students. Over the next four years, while sculpting the young minds of the Lower East Side, Ross Global will expand to an enrollment of 500 students, all the while growing within the community which surrounds it, becoming invested in the minds and lives of not only its pupils, but its neighborhood as a whole.

ken heart over her failed marriage to Frank Sinatra.

"I didn't know what to do, so I walked over to their table, and asked if I could join them," said Saltzman. He said John Lennon replied, "Sure, mate, pull up a chair," and they all started joking and bantering back and forth.

"From then on, I spent the next week just hanging out with the Beatles, Donovan, and Mia Farrow at the Ashram," said Saltzman. "They accepted me into their circle, and we sat around taking pictures of each other, meditating, and talking about life. They also allowed me to watch them write songs and compose music."

Saltzman emphasized that when he took the candid photos of the Beatles, he only had an old, inexpensive, 35 mm Pentax camera with him, and that he was not a professional photographer. "We all were taking pictures just for fun, and I only took 54 in the week," he said. "I could have taken hundreds of shots, or had myself photographed with the Beatles, but that's not why I was there — I didn't even get an autograph." The framed, 22 by 30-inch photos in his collection, at East End Books, show the Beatles together and separately, wearing white Indian silk shirts and pantaloons, with flowers around their necks and hair, in the hippie style of the day. They are playing their instruments, laughing and joking around, and sitting around the Ashram grounds.

"The Beatles in Rishikesh," copyright 1968, by Paul Saltzman.

During this period in 1968, in which the Beatles spent many weeks at the Ashram, they wrote 48 songs that mostly ended up on the "White Album." Some of these songs include, "Obla Dee, Obla Da," "Sexy Sadie," "Dear Prudence" (about Mia Farrow's sister), and "While My Guitar Gently Weeps," which George Harrison wrote. Ringo stayed at the Ashram for 11 days, Paul for five weeks, and John and George for eight weeks each.

This period in India was not only life changing for Saltzman, but it was life changing for the Beatles, since they added a new dimension to their musical sound. They had formerly incorporated some Celtic drones into their music, and now they combined this with Indian drones, from such instruments as the sitar. George Harrison was the first Beatle who was moved to learn the sitar and study Indian music, and he helped to inspire the others.

When Saltzman left the Ashram, he continued his filmmaking career, making over 300 documentary and feature films. He came back to Toronto, married and had a family. About 30 years later, several years ago, his daughter asked him about his trip to India, and what ever happened to his photos of the Beatles?

"I had forgotten that I had developed them and put them in a shoebox in the basement, so I dug them out, and amazingly, the film was still good," he said. "I decided to have them appraised by Sotheby's Auction House in London, and they told me these were "some of the most intimate and candid shots of the Beatles they had ever seen." I decided to go out on my own and exhibit them, and I made them into a first book, and now I have another coffee table art book, which is for sale at East End Books, in two different versions." The oversized books have either leather or silk covers, and come with CDs of their Indian-inspired music, and DVDs of documentary footage. Saltzman's photo exhibit and books have been seen in Toronto, London, Paris, Milan, New York City, and other cities.

"The Beatles in India" photo exhibit will be at East End Books in East Hampton through July 27. From there, it will continue to travel around the world.

Play That One More Time

Riverhead Goes Wild During The Blues Festival

By Debbie Tuma

About 40 fabulous bands were "singing the blues" last Saturday and Sunday, when they appeared on three different stages at the Eighth Annual Riverhead Blues Festival. The weather was a real plus for this year's huge turnout of thousands—with clear, sunny skies both days, and temperatures in the 80s each day.

The gorgeous July weather enticed more people to come to this two-day event, from all over the island, the city, and the Tri-state area. They brought lawn chairs and blankets to sit on, and they sprawled out all around the banks of the Peconic River and the parking lots behind the Main Street stores. This year's venue, organized once more by the Riverhead Business Improvement District (BID), consisted of the Main Stage outdoors, and two indoor venues; the historic Vail Leavitt Music Hall and Club 91, both downtown. This year, they charged a small admission price of $5.00, for both days of musical entertainment. Adults and children were walking around with their red or blue bracelets on, which they were given upon paying at the gate. At the entrance on Saturday, a long line of motorcycles were parked out front.

The blues festival always draw some interesting characters and people are usually dressed in colorful clothes—with a lot of tie-dye T-shirts and jeans, wild hats, tattoos, and other hippie attire. Throughout the afternoon, people enjoyed sitting in the sun, snacking on food items from the concession stands and clapping or rocking to the music, which permeated the air.

On Saturday, we wandered between venues to catch some of each act and saw "Blue Roots" on the Main Stage at 11 a.m., Keith Harden at the Vail-Leavitt at 11:30 a.m., and then "Who Are These Guys" at Club 91 at 12 noon. Sometime during their noontime performance, we also caught some of "Joe Vicino and the Smokedaddys" on the Main Stage. I am a fan of Vicino, who is no stranger to Riverhead, having also played at the Vail Lavitt a few months ago with Gail Storm's band. Gail Storm, who lives in Huntington but also has a home in Montauk, took the stage of the Vail-Leavitt once more during the mid-day on Saturday and rocked the house with her unique, bluesy and sultry sound. She later played that evening at Tweed's restaurant on Main Street, which by the way, is an absolutely sensational restaurant.

Another of my favorite blues bands is "Pamela Betti and the Bluebloods," who played on Saturday on the Main Stage outdoors, and since the energy of this female singer is so upbeat, many people got up and boogied in the parking lot. Pamela Betti, who has also played frequently at the pre-blues concert benefits at Atlantis Marine World, is another great female vocalist and performer, who also performed at last year's blues festival upstate in the Catskills. One of my all-time favorite blues bands, "Frank Latorre and the King Bees," performed on the Main Stage mid-afternoon on Saturday, with their wonderful original sound, which got more people up dancing and swinging to this powerful beat. They also have CDs available, as did many of the bands we saw that day. After this great performance, we wandered back to the Vail-Leavitt to get out of the hot sun, and sat in for a while to watch Kane Daily—a wild, long-haired man with a bright red guitar, belt out his songs from the 70s as well as blues hits. "Remember the 70s? Today is the first day of the rest of your life," he smiled as he synchronized with his bass player who had a turquoise guitar that matched the drummer's turquoise drum set.

Tired again of the darkness, we now needed a "sun break" and walked back through the growing crowds, over to the Main Stage to catch two great groups—Bobby Nathan and Hooch and the Bluesicians, which was real bluesy and upbeat, from guys wearing red and purple shirts. "Hooch" is a great harp player and entertainer. Next to us, Ed Slaughter was wearing a bright yellow staff tee shirt, as a member of BID and also the Long Island Blues Society.

Greenport Tea Company

119A Main Street
Greenport
631-447-8744

Greenport Tea Company has been in existence for almost 16 years and has really become an institution in Greenport, so when its owner decided to sell it two years ago many regular patrons must have wondered and worried that their favorite spot would be transformed out of recognition by the new owners Jan Kirwan and Jenette Holloway. However, Jan and Jenette, Manhattan residents and financial professionals, had summered in Orient for years and knew the place well. This was exactly what they had been looking for, once they decided to make significant career changes and move into the restaurant business. Neither has formal catering training and both freely admit that the transition brought challenges that they had not anticipated, but today the charming tearoom restaurant remains a great place to meet for a light lunch, or to indulge in a decadently sinful afternoon tea in the traditional British style. Actually, as an ex-Brit let me dispel the rumor – they do not sit down to this kind of fare every day at 4pm!

Jan and Jenette have made few changes to the décor except to make the surroundings a little lighter. The ambience is still so friendly and welcoming as soon as you enter. It really is worth taking a while to look at the window displays and the range of teapots and associated items around the room. I must admit to being biased having been brought up where every town had at least one tearoom. They are, in a some ways, anachronistic and nostalgic, but they also serve a very practical purpose, for where else nowadays can you go for anything from a cup of tea, to a piece of delectable quiche, to a scone and jam, to a refreshing salad, which is very family oriented?

We started with the two soups of the day, served with Jenettes's homemade corn bread. I have written before that I firmly believe that a very good initial appraisal of any restaurant can be made by sampling their soup and bread – if they are good, you will almost certainly enjoy the rest of the fare. I have never found this to fail and here both were truly excellent. Black bean soup can be depressingly heavy and thick but here it was light, full of deep bean tastes lightly accentuated by a hint of cumin and garnished with scallions and a little cream. Cheddar and ale soup is another that can be very dense and cloying but here it was superbly light with well balanced ingredients and a lovely silky texture and as we, as usual, shared these, I must admit to wishing that Stella had left me a larger portion to taste! The corn bread was everything that corn bread should be and often isn't; fresh, light textured with a clean taste.

Quiches are another of my long time loves and if you have ever made them you will know the number of egg yolks and heavy cream that most recipes call for. Jenette produces very light fluffy quiches with a tasty crust and she told us that her recipes use less eggs and no cream. These, like the soups, are very highly recommended especially as you can eat the quiche without a sense of guilt.

We also sampled one of the daily specials, a chicken salad on a ciabatta roll that perhaps we should have had in one of their wraps to make it easier to handle. The chicken was lightly curried and could have been a little more spicy to make an impact. Salads are also a main feature ranging from Greek to Caesar (no eggs or anchovies) to grilled chicken and shrimp. Judging by the crisp, fresh side salad dressed with delectable home made mustard vinaigrette that we had with the quiche, these undoubtedly should be good but we had to leave those for another day.

Naturally, we had to sample desserts. The special bread pudding was a real treat and the homemade scone, in fact almost everything here is homemade, served with strawberry jam of course, and a light version of clotted cream was superb. One of their specialties is a full 'traditional' afternoon tea that comprises tea sandwiches, scones, pastries, tarts and fruit and comes beautifully served on a three-tier stand, complete of course with a pot of tea of your choice. They have 16 regular teas, 5 decaf varieties and 6 herbal teas from which to make your selection.

Prices here are very reasonable with soup at $4.50, salads, quiches and wraps from $9.95 to $14.95 and the full afternoon tea that easily serves two people is $24.75. They also serve a small range of wines both local and from other regions. They are open from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m. (sometimes later).

Jan runs the front of the house and Jenette is the chef and between them they have ensured that the people of Greenport, and Eastern Long Island and many, many visitors can enjoy very well cooked, light but extremely tasty food. Jenette is adamant that there will never be a deep fryer in their kitchen!

Things Are Ramping Up at Roanoke

When Rich and Soraya Pisacano opened their Roanoke Vineyards tasting room in the fall of 2004, the only Roanoke-labeled wine was a stellar 2000 merlot that is, sadly, long gone. To fill in the tasting room menu, they poured wines from Atwater Estate Vineyards in the Finger Lakes and Wolffer Estate on the South Fork, where Rich is vineyard manager.

What started with that lone merlot, has grown into an impressive portfolio of wines, including two distinctly different Bordeaux-style blends, a hard-to-find cabernet sauvignon, a fresh-but-intriguing chardonnay and an extremely popular rosé.

Rich has been tending vines on Long Island since high school and despite the push for merlot on Long Island, he prefers cabernet sauvignon. And, with one of the western-most vineyards on the North Fork, his unique microclimate makes it a bit easier to ripen the king of all red grapes. Red wines are definitely the focus at Roanoke Vineyards and that drive and passion is abundantly clear in each of their limited-edition wines.

Roanoke Vineyards 2005 De Rosa Rose ($14) is an extremely popular blend of cabernet franc, merlot, cabernet sauvignon and chardonnay in Roanoke's rustic, inviting tasting room. Salmon colored in the glass, its nose and palate display the ripeness of the 2005 vintage with intense strawberry aromas. While not bone dry, this well balanced rose shows nice balance between ripe red berry flavors, acidity and subtle sweetness. The finish features a refreshing lime note.

Roanoke's first white wine release is their 2005 Chardonnay ($17). 60% barrel fermentation brings freshness while 40% fermentation in barrel brings depth and a softness. Refreshing apple and Asian pear aromas lead to a well balance palate that blends apple and melon flavors with richer, more tropical notes. Nice acidity brings balance to this wine and makes it perfect for summer drinking. This is a style that I prefer to over-manipulated, oaky chardonnay any day.

First and foremost, Roanoke is about reds, and while you may not be able to get your hands on their rich, cellar-worthy 2003 cabernet sauvignon, Pisacano's 2003 cabernet fruit is on display in Roanoke Vineyards' 2003 Blend One ($30) a Meritage-style blend of 48% cabernet sauvignon, 30% merlot and 22% cabernet franc. Rich and ripe, especially for a not-so-great year, the nose is highlighted by intense black berry and black cherry aromas with violet wisps and peppery spice. Full bodied and rich, intense fruit flavors are balanced by oak, fine tannins and a lengthy finish. Drinking well now, this wine probably hasn't peaked yet. Roth made this wine for the long haul. Stock your cellar.

Very few wineries produce multiple Meritage-style wines, but Roanoke Vineyards' 2003 Blend Two ($36) — named purely because it was the second blend — certainly doesn't play second fiddle to its big brother blend one. Cabernet franc (48%) dominates this blend with 32% cabernet sauvignon and 20% merlot added to the final wine. Extremely aromatic — because of that cabernet franc — violets, berry fruit and vanilla oak intermingle in a tempting nose. Slightly lighter bodied, this blend is still concentrated and rich with berries, plums and spice. Also well suited to some cellar time, this wine might be closer to its peak.

Rich and Soraya still pour Wolffer wines in their tasting room, but their wines are clearly the focus — and well they should be. If you join the wine club, you might even be able to buy some of their 2000 merlot or 2003 cabernet. That in and of itself makes it well worth it.

The Tour De North Fork

How About We Get Our Own Bike Race?

Tour de Fork. Why not? If the French can wheel out their three-week Tour de France bicycle race every summer, why can't we on the North Fork do a little biking of our own?

For weeks now, we've been parlez-voused about France's high-profile race. How it covers more than 2,250 miles. How it's been around since 1903 and held every year except during World War I and World War II. And how it rolls into parts of Spain, Belgium, Germany and other far-away places most Americans will never visit. Yeah, sure, we're proud of American Lance Armstrong. We know he's the only Tour de France participant who ever won the race seven times in seven consecutive years – 1999 through 2005.

But we've got some pretty enthusiastic cyclists here on our North Fork and some mighty fine bike routes. There's one guy who can tell us all about them. Let's pedal on over to Country Time Cycles in Mattituck and talk with owner Greg Williams.

There he is now – taking delivery of 50 new bikes. Those hundred new wheels will be spinning all over the North Fork probably within the next few weeks. Country Time Cycles, in business for 25 years, sells lots of bikes. More than 1,000 a year. They service bikes, sell all kinds of gear, and even sponsor the Country Time Cycle Club, the only bicycling club on the North Fork. Country Time is indeed a kind of cycling center.

Greg, who says he rides his bike about 120 miles each week (he looks in fine shape), offered several reasons why our area is so bike-friendly. Our main roads have wide shoulders, we have less traffic than any other area of Long Island, and the North Fork is so scenic. A favorite spot? Greg enjoys riding in New Suffolk, especially over the bridges and alongside Peconic Bay. This from a guy who's biked all over – including most of New England.

As we spoke, Greg mentioned he was rooting for American George Hincapie in the Tour de France which concludes July 23. Hincapie isn't just an American. He's a Long Islander – having grown up in Farmingdale. We'll have to invite him out to the North Fork. He can tell us all why biking is beautiful. Meantime, I've a few thoughts about that.

Bicycling is economical. Let's say you want to go to New London from Orient Point. Why you want to go to New London, I've no idea. But once there, you'll certainly want to return. Round-trip on the Cross Sound ferry for car and driver is $88. For bike and rider? Only $22.

Riding a bike is calming. You never have a couple of kids fighting in the back seat all the way from Riverhead to Grandma's house in Peconic. You know the routine. It's the one that always ends up with, "If I hear one more sound out of either one of you, I'm gonna stop this car and you'll both walk home."

Bicycling is also labor-saving. That's important if you hate labor. Just think. You never have to vacuum out a bike. No sand all over the floor, no candy wrappers squashed between the cushions. With a bike, all you occasionally clean out is a basket. And with a little luck, most of the stuff in it will blow away. Right into the Southold landfill.

Then there's noise. This is called the quiet fork, right? Well, if we're to keep it that way, the bicycle is the vehicle of choice. No loud horn, no muffler full of holes, no volume-on-high radio. No obscenities screamed out of quickly rolled-down windows, either. We don't use language like that on the North Fork.

Have I mentioned accessibility? When you can't squeeze another car into Tanger, when the Aquebogue friend you're visiting has four cars parked in her driveway, when they're turning cars away from Orient Beach State Park, when you've discovered in Southold (and you're not telling exactly where) a dirt road smooth enough for a bike but not wide enough for a car, then you know bicycling is best.

Now take a look at your legs. Go ahead. No one else is looking at them. If you've been bicycling long enough, you've nothing to worry about. Your legs are strong and firm. Both of them. But if the only exercise you get is accelerating and braking with your right foot, then that's all you've got. A good-looking right foot.

Don't despair. The Tour de France may be thousands of miles away, but the Tour de Fork is at our front door. Vive le difference!

– Phyllis Lombardi

Lenz Winery Matches Pétrus, Other Top Bordeaux

Red wines from the Lenz Winery were recently judged the equal of three notable red Bordeaux: Château Pétrus, Château Latour, and Château Figeac. The comparative blind tasting, held at the New York Yacht Club on March 15, 2006, included wines from the recent, widely acclaimed 2000 vintage, as well as vintages from as far back as 1993.

The wines were tasted single-blind in four flights of six. That is, the tasters knew what wines were in each flight but not which wine was in which glass*. Each flight contained 3 Lenz wines and 3 Bordeaux from the same vintages. Tasters were asked to compare the wines and award each a score on a 100-point scale. Later, the wines were revealed to the tasters.

The first flight included Lenz merlots and wines from Château Figeac, a highly-respected producer from St. Emilion. Lenz makes three merlots, ranging in quality and price from the basic Lenz Merlot ($15), via the Lenz Estate Selection Merlot ($23), to the Lenz Old Vines Merlot ($55). The first flight would see how the 2 lower-priced Lenz merlots compared with wines from St. Emilion, across three recent vintages.

Flight 1
Rank	Average Points	Wine	Vintage	Price
1	89.0	Lenz Estate Selection	2000	$30
2	88.8	Château Figeac	2002	$58
3	88.1	Lenz Estate Selection	2001	$30
4	86.9	Château Figeac	2000	$100
5	86.8	Lenz Merlot	2002	$15
6	85.4	Château Figeac	2001	$65

In this flight a Lenz wine came first. As in all the flights, there was only a modest spread of scores among the leading wines in each flight. Each Lenz 'estate selection' wine (Lenz's 'middle quality' designation) was ranked higher in this flight than its vintage counterpart. That is, the Lenz 2000 Estate Selection scored higher than the 2000 Figeac and the 2001 Lenz Estate Selection scored higher than the 2001 Figeac.

The average retail price of the 3 Figeac wines is $75 per bottle, and the average of the 3 Lenz merlots is $25.

The second flight compared 3 Lenz cabernet sauvignons with wines from Château Latour, one of the super-star classified growths from Pauilliac. The vintages were 2000, 2001 and 2002.

Flight 2
Rank	Average Points	Wine	Vintage	Price
1	91.3	Lenz Old Vines Cabernet	2001	$30
2	91.2	Château Latour	2002	$225
3	89.6	Château Latour	2000	$700
4	88.6	Lenz Old Vines Cabernet	2002	$30
5	87.6	Château Latour	2001	$200
6	86.6	Lenz Old Vines Cabernet	2000	$30

As with the first flight, a Lenz cabernet 'won', albeit narrowly. In this case it was the Lenz 2000 Old Vines Cabernet that ended in first place. Château Latour acquitted itself well, as one would expect with such a renowned first-growth Bordeaux, with 2nd, 3rd and 5th-place finishes. The average retail price of the 3 Latour wines is $375, and the average of the 3 Lenz cabernets is $30: so you could buy a whole case of Lenz cab for the price of a single bottle of Château Latour. And still have $15 change.

The third flight was designed to test the proposition that Bordeaux reds improve with age while - according to some - Long Island reds do not. Accordingly, this flight pitted three older vintages of Lenz Merlot (what Lenz now calls "Old Vines Merlot") against the same vintages of Château Pétrus: 1997, 1995 and 1993.

Flight 3
Rank	Average Points	Wine	Vintage	Price
1	91.0	Château Pétrus	1997	$700
2	89.4	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	1995	$50
3	89.2	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	1997	$55
4	88.6	Château Pétrus	1995	$875
5	87.6	Château Pétrus	1993	$545
6	87.6	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	1993	$30

First, congratulations to Château Pétrus: this flight had a clear winner with a gap of 1.6 points between the 1st-place Pétrus and the 2nd-place Lenz. Lenz did well, though, with 2nd, 3rd (equal) and 5th-place rankings.

Does this flight show that Lenz merlots don't age as well as Château Pétrus? Hardly. The Lenz wines averaged 88.7 while the 3 Pétrus averaged 89.6, not even a point better. And both the '95 and '97 Lenz merlots came in ahead of the equivalent Pétrus vintages. This suggests that Lenz merlots are not only closely comparable in quality with Château Pétrus when young but also after a decade or more.

Meanwhile, the average retail price of the 3 Pétrus wines is over $700, while the average of the 3 Lenz merlots was $30 when they were in release (they are now sold out).

In the final flight, Lenz Old Vines Merlots from the excellent 2000, 2001 & 2002 vintages were tasted blind against Château Pétrus from the same vintages. The 2000 vintage is regarded as one of the best ever in Bordeaux. Robert Parker, who writes the influential 'Wine Advocate', gave the 2000 Pétrus 100 points on his well-known 100-point rating scale. Here's what he said when awarding it maximum points:

"The 2000 Petrus has turned out to be magically endowed.....its inky black/ruby/purple color is followed by a stunning perfume of concentrated black fruits, great ripeness, huge, tannic structure, immense body, and a majestic 60-second finish."

Flight 4
Rank	Average Points	Wine	Vintage	Price
1	91.9	Château Pétrus	2000	$2,650
2	90.9	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	2000	$55
3	90.7	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	2001	$55
4	90.6	Château Pétrus	2002	$480
5	90.1	Lenz Old Vines Merlot	2002	$55
6	89.5	Château Pétrus	2001	$600

Congratulations to Château Pétrus, with an outright 1st place for its fantastic 2000-vintage wine, a full point ahead of the Lenz Old Vines Merlot of the same vintage.

In this extraordinarily strong flight, Lenz did quite well overall, with 2nd, 3rd and 5th-place finishes for its 2000, 2001 and 2002 Old Vines.

The average score for the three Lenz wines was 90.6, while the average for the three Pétrus vintages was 90.7. It would be hard not to conclude that Lenz Old Vines Merlot is more-or-less the equal of Château Pétrus in quality.

Lenz did well on value-for-money, too. The average retail price of the 3 Pétrus wines is almost $1,250, while the average of the 3 Lenz Old Vines Merlots is a mere $55 - less than 1/20th the average cost of the Pétrus wines. Alternatively, you could buy 4 whole cases of the Lenz Old Vines Merlot 2000 for the $2,650 price of a single bottle of the 2000 Pétrus - of course, you would be giving up one rating point per bottle!

The Most Beautiful Sailboat On The Planet

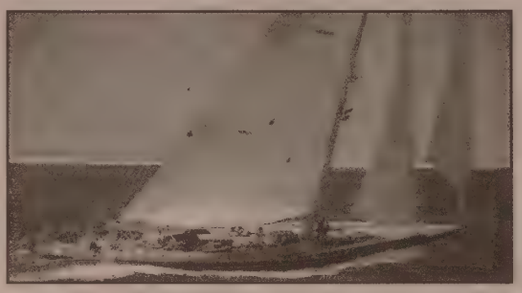
World Class Racing Boat, Endeavour, Zips Off The Coast Of Orient

By T.J.Clemente

If you were looking west of Orient at the Block Island Sound last week you may have had the chance to see one of the most if not the most magnificent J-class sailboat ever built. It is Endeavour J K-4. The sailboat was actually built in Gasport, England in 1934, commissioned by Sir T.O.M. Sopwith and proclaimed by many to be the "most beautiful J boat ever built."

However, over time, the vessel fell into ill repair and in the early 1980s was without mast, keel and rudder. The tale of her demise is almost un-believable. It was actually bought by some carpenters for 10 British pounds and escaped a scrap merchants saw, who just couldn't chop her up. In the seventies she even sank.

In 1984 Elizabeth Meyers of Newport, Rhode Island using $10,000,000 to restore Endeavour, launched a phenomenal restoration effort. The 130 ft sailboat was shipped to Southampton, England where, at the old seaplane base Calshot Spit, the major work began. There restoration was done to her deck, keel, ballast and rudder. Then when declared seaworthy she was launched and towed to Holland where her mast, boom and rigging were built.



Modern generators, engine and electronic gear were also installed there. This took five long years and in 1989 the restored classic made her maiden appearance in the Antigua Classics Regatta, which she won.

As Endeavour was cruising around our waters she effortlessly passed many of the pleasure yachts as if they were anchored. I was out there myself on the mighty Seven Lengths and William Money as Endeavour crisscrossed around me as if my modest 23 foot O'Day was floating in some motel bathtub. Its beauty looking like a thrown spear cruising through the air, took me back. Its mast, over 100 ft high, was the tallest I had ever seen in person. With three huge sails caressing the wind, almost in a magic carpet type of glide. Endeavour keeled left and right as if to show off her design beauty to all of us watching in awe. At the time, I had no idea what I was looking at. I was just sailing off Orient when this masterpiece crept over the horizon and charged right in my direction. I decided to find out. As I came to shore an old skipper looked at me and knew. He said, "Did you see Endeavour out there today? It's a sight you won't soon forget." Funny thing was that this was a commercial fisherman who said that. I agreed with him and decided to do the research.

Endeavour was actually built to compete in The America's Cup by the British contingent led by Sir Richard Fairley and in fact did not win the right to sail for the Cup. However, at the time, no one doubted her beauty and majesty. As beautiful and amazing as big yachts are, there are none that I have seen to date can compare to the lines and sleekness that this massive 130 ft sailboat had in full sail with perhaps a crew of 25 as it darted about the Orient waters. As crazy as this sounds, the Endeavour looked every bit of the ten million dollars Ms. Meyers spent. She did eventually sell it for fifteen million dollars to do other restoration projects.

"The crowds have been great here today," he said. "People are here to relax and enjoy the music, so we don't usually get any problems. Blues people tend to be a mellow bunch. This is the fifth year I've worked at this event, and it's always a lot of fun for everyone."

When asked what his favorite bands are, at this event, he said, "My favorites are Sam Taylor and Kerry Kearney—they are both great singers and very accomplished in their blues music. They've both been playing on the circuit for awhile." Slaughter said Sam Taylor "is an icon—a 70 year-old who has been playing blues in Riverhead, who was stationed at the Westhampton Beach airbase, and who is in the Rhythm and Blues Hall of Fame." Today, Taylor had special guest violinist Heather Hardy, who was excellent. Slaughter also credited "Little Toby Walker" with being a "great acoustic guitar player, of the old Delta blues style, who is a great musical storyteller."

Also in the blues festival crowd, was Judith Leavitt, a native of Riverhead, whose grandfather bought the music hall from the Vail family. "My family goes back here in Riverhead, and my grandfather helped to get this music hall started," she explained, while watching the different blues bands perform.

Throughout both days of music, the grounds were covered with food concessions, from candy apples and fried clams, to giant sausages and corn on the cob, to burgers, pizza and smoothies. There were many booths of jewelry and tie-dyed clothing for sale, like "Mr. Mark," who takes his line of great hippie clothes on the road to all blues festivals here and upstate New York. There were booths of handmade crafts, henna for the hair, and washable tattoo designs for the body. There were candles and incense for sale, as well as homemade soaps and giant rubber doormats in fish designs.

Eva Growney, an architect of Amagansett, said it was her first time coming to the Riverhead Blues festival, and she was having a great time. "I love this music, and it's so much fun to be able to wander around and hear so many great bands in one day," she said. "I'm hoping to come back here tomorrow."

Coming Up At The Wineries

You Absolutely Have To Check Out The Vineyards On The North Fork

If you are a wine connoisseur or someone who enjoys a glass or two, you have come to the right place. Whether you want to visit a small, family owned vineyard and receive one-on-one attention or you are looking for a larger vineyard with entertainment, the North Fork can meet your every need.

In addition to wine tours, the month of July attracts a lot of benefits, live entertainers, and special events to the wineries.

One of the biggest events of the summer is a wine camp on July 24-27. This four day and three night camp will immerse wine enthusiasts into the world of Long Island wines and will teach you how some of the best wines in the country are made. Participants will have the opportunity to work in the vineyards on seasonal activities, blend wines in laboratories with professional winemakers, learn professional tasting techniques, how to pair wines with all types of food, and find out just what makes Long Island uniquely suited to growing wine grapes. You will leave with a new comfort level and a deeper knowledge of wine to share with friends wherever you go. For more information visit or call 631-495-9744.

Lenz Winery on Main Road in Peconic and The Greenport Theatre are presenting a screening of Mondovino on Saturday July 22. Mondovino, directed by Jonathan Nossiter, is an epic exploration into the modern world of wine, juxtaposing artisanal winegrowers and multi-national conglomerates, with an insiders' access and an artist's eye. Since this independent film has created a lot of controversy within the wine industry, Lenz Winemaker Eric Fry will hold a question and answer session after the film. Prior to the film there will be a reception with Lenz wines at 5:30 p.m. If you are interested in attending this event call the Greenport Theatre at 631-477-8600.

If you would like to spend a relaxing evening among the vines of the North Fork, don't miss Sunset Serenade on July 28 at Castello di Borghese Vineyard on Route 48 in Cutchogue. Music Long Island will be performing their first concert at 6:30 p.m. Join soprano Viktoria Kurbatskaya, tenor Dinyar Vania, and composer, vocal coach and pianist Martin Hennessy for a sunset concert. Bring a picnic dinner, blanket or chair to make your evening more romantic.

Ready for a taste test? Check out Lieb Vineyards during the day on Saturdays or Sundays for a tasting of thier fantastic new releases. Located in Mattituck call them at 631-298-1942. Tell Gary that we said hello.

Do you enjoy painting? Palmer Vineyards and The Long Island Academy of Fine Art presents Paint Long Island every Thursday at the vineyard on Sound Avenue in Aquebogue. From 9 a.m. to noon or 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. enjoy outdoor oil painting with your friends and an instructor. No matter if you are a beginner or an advanced student, come spend a few hours sharpening your skills. Contact The Long Island Fine Arts Academy at 516-924-3294 for more information and a supply list.

If painting is not your thing but Palmer Vineyards is, come to the White Nights Wine Festival on July 22 from 7 to 10 p.m. This evening is dedicated to the exceptional white varietals that are grown on Long Island. Tastings of Pinot Blanc, Sauvignon Blanc, Riesling, Gewurztraminer and Chardonnay will be offered along with some very special barrel samples and library vintages. Advance reservations are required so call 631-722-9463 to join the fun.

Celebrate the release of the 2001 vintage year wines at Millenni-Yum Wines at Ternhaven Cellars on Front Street in Greenport. On July 21 from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. savor their Merlot, Cabernet Sauvignon and Claret D'Alvah, a meritage blend. The festivities, including wine tasting, music, cheeses from Bruce's Cheese Emporium and prizes is situated in the quaint village of Greenport.

One of the most popular rages at the wineries is live music. While sipping a glass of wine you can now enjoy listening to a handful of talented entertainers. Pindar Vineyards has live music on the pavilion every Saturday and Sunday from 1 to 5 p.m. They encourage families and friends to bring a picnic lunch to make your vineyard side experience more enjoyable. Galluccio Family Wineries on Main Road in Cutchogue has live music of all genres on Saturdays from 1 to 5 p.m. A classical jazz band will be playing at in the pavilion at Bedell Cellars on Main Road in Cutchogue on the afternoon of July 29. Pianist Anthony Roman will be playing on July 29 at 2 p.m. at Castello di Borghese Vineyard. Every Saturday and Sunday Jamesport Vineyards on Main Road in Jamesport will be having live jazz from 1 to 5 p.m.

Enjoy a wonderful day out and about at the local vineyards and wineries. Sip on award winning wines with friends and family right around the corner. Make sure you always designate a driver in advance to ensure a safe and fun filled day. See you in the tasting room!

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Summer Thoughts

Many men go fishing all of their lives without knowing that it is not fish they are after.

–Henry David Thoreau

I often wonder why some folks say they have a "brown thumb." Perhaps it is just that they do not get the "connection" I do from gardening. Nature is a thoughtful teammate when it comes to gardening, and provides all the energy and "will to live" required to be successful. In a year like this one, with cooler temperatures and plenty of moisture, gardening is a "no brainer" and everyone can have a green thumb.

This is proving a wonderful gardening year. The weather conditions have meant that grass has retained its color. The texture and size of leaves have filled every space in the garden, and they provide a dense, green backdrop for flowering plants. It has been an especially good season for hydrangea, and East End gardens are swollen with their dense, blue florets.

Like Thoreau's fishermen, after five decades of gardening, I wonder if it is the gardening or something other than the garden I am after? Probably! Yet, defining what it is may rob me of the exact quality I love in gardening. Let it suffice to say that gardening inspires me, provides a time to think and ponder, commune with nature, and feel a sense of belonging to the universe that is not satisfied by any other thing I do.

Gardening is the picture frame, I've learned, against which I can paint a changing picture that is as fleeting as the seasons. Of course, this gives me much more credit than I deserve. My garden work is simply an interpretation. The gardener simply arranges things, puts forth a perspective on his surroundings, and enables others to see it. As momentary as dance, as ephemeral as theater, nothing is a more rewarding or more elusive art form than gardening!

With the recent surge of heat this week, hibiscus, banana, and palm are now invigorated and responding to the humidity and intense sunlight. Caladiums, elephant ears, and tuberose are shooting up their leaves and flowers in response to summer. These all add a different perspective to the East End garden and create a landscape that seems tropicalized and other worldly. The Asiatic lilies begin to punctuate the landscape with their vivid colors and a concentrated, heady scent. It can't get any closer to a garden of Eden, I believe.

The line between the garden and the surrounding woods is not distinct, and I can hardly tell where one ends and the other begins. The two complement each other, and give a sense that the garden goes on forever – which it does not. Still, there is a sense of space that beckons me beyond myself. Even the deer fencing that is necessary to keep plants from being eaten fades away into the woods and does not obstruct the overall effect. It is like a vaccination against the deer, and the garden, once inoculated, flourishes unexposed to gnashing teeth.

On weekends I garden all day and at the end of the day still want to keep going. Others say I am a "type A" personality and cannot control myself. I guess I am addicted to my spot of turf and soil. Somehow the act of gardening energizes me, fills me with joy and hope. It seems less false than the effect real drugs might produce. Gardening lets me revel in the moment. What a joy it is to pull out that nasty weed and nurture "splendor in the grass, glory in the flower."

The trouble with gardening, of course, is that it begs to move beyond an avocation to become an addiction. Lord knows there are weekends that I spend any available cash to buy that ounce of seed, the plant "that I really need." Gardening entices you and you cannot escape it. I never thought of myself as a "lotus eater," but somehow when I let my eyes rove about the garden I cannot bear to keep from getting my fingers into the soil. When I go visiting to other homes, my eyes also rove, and a serious stroll becomes irresistible in comparison to the offered cocktail.

This year has been heaven itself for gardening. If you have even an inkling that you would like to try it – now is the time!

Isn't That Just Precious (Metal)

I have a favorite pair of earrings. They are my summer pair; you know, the ones that you wear to the beach and barbecues. They go with practically everything. Essentially, they are a small round hoop made of 24-karat gold and the outer portion is covered in sterling silver. They are simple, pretty and enhance every outfit I wear. So here are my thoughts. If gold and silver look great as part of an outfit when combined, I bet they'd look great in a house as part of the décor. You don't simply have to stick to one precious metal, you can intertwine and mix and match. Gold and silver go together like the proverbial horse and carriage.

Feel like redecorating or updating? You have your eye on a particular room in your house and you're thinking it needs a little something special? Gold and silver can be just what you're looking for. Gold has a sparkle to it, a twinkle that draws your eye to it, while silver has a more subtle approach, offering a more sedate accent to a room. You don't want to have too much of either, but a little bit of each can certainly perk up a boring room.

The trick is to have an object that is a focal point of the room, which combines either the tones of silver and gold, or is, in fact, made of both these metals. Think lamp, wallhanging, mirror, picture framewith two tones. You want that object to get the message across that you are combining shades. Now it's time for the subtler accents.

The Bubble Lamp from West Elm

Picture frames are great and easily available in both metals. An idea for you: Start with an 8"x10" or larger picture frame. Purchase it in gold. Select the same picture frame in silver in smaller frames, 4"x6" or 3"x5." Arrange the frames in a flower-like pattern on the wall. Place the gold one in the middle and the silver ones arranged around it like petals. This offers a spectacular presentation. You can then add frames with both metals around the room for effect. Or, you can simply hang the gold frame near a work of art, which combines both gold and silver tones. Use the smaller frames as enhancements around the room. Subtle, yet effective.

Mirrors are also wonderful decorating accessories. Levitz sells an assortment of mirrors in both gold and silver which can be utilized to enhance any room in the home. The Strousburg Mirror, part of the Strousburg collection, contains both gold and grey tones with beveled glass and museum mitered corners. It's a very pretty piece that sells for around $250. Put a mirror like that in any room and it's an open invitation to enhance the rest of the room with gold and silver too.

Curio cabinets offer a wonderful forum for decorating in color schemes. Purchase an ornate or plain curio in a neutral wood, such as oak, and enhance the cabinet with gold and silver collectibles. My mother has this solid gold bell from Europe that I could imagine sitting in a curio next to her other European collectibles, including a silver vase. These treasures are priceless reminders of our ancestors and deserve to be showcased in style. OneWayfurniture.com has a curio that is simple and elegant, aptly named "Hampton Pine and Creme White Curio Clock Cabinet." For $879, you can have a beautiful curio that features a clock with a silver face and plenty of storage for all of those collectibles. The white coloring allows the piece to be showcased in the room, but not take it over. Follow the color or wood scheme of the curio by adding a coffee table to the room. Many coffee tables come framed in metal. You can simply choose to go with the bold look of gold or the subtle look of silver in the frame, and then use the other metal as an accent color.

Regardless of the way you go, silver and gold will work their magic in any room of your house. So, when decorating your next room, add a bold twinkle or subtle sparkle and the room will be enhanced.

Spine Tingling Plants

I've just started an internship in New York City, and I've entered the world of 9-5 jobs. Or, more realistically, 7:15-7:15. It's been a real shock, adjusting to the train ride and the long days. But what I've really had trouble adjusting to is the complete disappearance of all my free time. I'm exhausted and about to pass out the minute I get home, and certainly not capable of doing anything complicated. Really, I'm completely shocked at how much other people are able to accomplish while holding down a full-time job. Least among these things is managing a few plants, let alone a garden. So I've been looking into cactuses, or cacti, because I've pretty much concluded that this type of plant is the only thing I'm capable of keeping alive, at least until I get the hang of this whole working thing.

Without even realizing it, many of us think that cacti can only grow in deserts and other exceptionally hot climates, such as those in the Southwest and in South America. Not so. While there are many types of cacti that do thrive in such environments, it is possible to grow cacti in a four season climate, such as what we have here in New York. In fact, it is quite possible to create your own little desert, without even planting in your garden – cacti do surprisingly well as potted plants.

As I was doing my research, I read that cacti need more water than commonly believed. I started worrying – are even cactuses high-maintenance? I kept reading, and found, to my relief, that generally, watering once a week is acceptable. In fact, the key to raising cacti is simply not to overwater, and some only require watering about once a month. The cactus is indeed one of the least needy plants on the planet, requiring only a little attention here and there. The misconception that cacti do not need water to survive may stem from the cactus's ability to go without water for quite a while, especially in humid climates. And since New York is quite humid, cacti that we grow here can be especially self-sufficient.

Generally, a potted cactus will grow mostly in the spring and fall and rest shortly in the hottest part of summer and spend a good deal of the winter sleeping. The best way to monitor the amount of water the cactus needs is to watch for signs of growth. In the winter, as it sleeps, it needs no water. When springtime arrives, it is crucial to wait for signs of growth, such as a flower bud or a new spine. Soaking the roots is a good way to give the cacti the water they need once this stage arrives, and then continue through the summer by watering occasionally.

Of course, before you begin worrying about watering, you'll need to choose a soil for your cactus. Cacti don't require fertilizer, and in fact, using it can have unfavorable results. You should, however, make your own soil mixture. A good combination is soil mixed with pea gravel and rocks, and a very small amount of sand and organic material. Although sand is the dominant component of the soil in deserts where many cacti grow, using too much of it with a potted cactus may become a problem.

Choosing a type of cactus is a tough decision, and pronouncing the names of all the varieties is probably the most difficult thing about having a cactus. The Echinocereus genus has many species which bloom in all different colors, and they grow quite fast compared to other types of cacti. The Mammillaria genus is also quite pretty, and its flowers usually form a distinct ring of flowers around the tops of the stems. Cacti from the Ferocactus genus are less likely to bloom as house plants, but their spines are some of the most complex. These cacti do well with large amounts of sun. Yet another genus, the Astrophytum genus, has its own unique characteristics. Many varieties are spineless, with an attractive felt where the spines would have been. Many also have white speckled patterns on their skin called flocking. The flowers in this variety are magnificent.

An important thing to remember when growing your cactus is that no matter how successfully it grows, it will not look the same as its counterpart in nature. Potted cacti grow more slowly and are smaller than cacti found in their natural habitats. But, a small cactus is better than no cactus, and since forgetting to water these plants is practically vital to their success, I think I'll take the mini version

One Swell Well

We all try to make our gardens and our surroundings as pleasant and as visually pleasing as possible. Yet, after spending thousands of dollars on flowering trees and shrubs, and hundreds of hours planting pretty annuals, something is still missing. Every garden needs an atmosphere, a feeling to evoke – every garden needs character. Imagine your garden with a little more imagination and romance. Imagine that it is a place that encourages fantasy and play. Imagine a garden that brings you back in time. This is what a garden should be, an escape from reality, a haven. There are simple ways to add whimsy and character to your garden, one of which is adding a simple wishing well to the landscape.

A wishing well can be tucked into the back of your landscaping scheme, surrounded by plants and vines, or it can stand alone, the central focus of the property. Either way, a wishing well will set the tone and the mood for your garden. Wishing wells fit perfectly into a natural-looking cottage landscape. If accented with other simple garden features, like a picket fence and wildly growing flowers, it will make your garden instantly quaint. This enchanting structure is great if you want to establish a focal point in your garden, as it instantly draws the eye towards it. Wishing wells can serve many purposes in the garden. For example, many gardeners use one as a planter, overflowing with cascading plants. To make the well seem as if it has been there for centuries, plant fast growing vines around it. Once they have grabbed hold of the well it will seem like an ancient, firmly-planted, bottomless wishing well. Wishing wells provide a great and convenient solution for unsightly objects in the yard. Place it over water pipes, an old stump, or other problem areas in your yard.

A rustic wishing well looks great in the middle of a well-cared-for lawn with some old trees. It becomes a central part of your yard, yet looks very understated. A little wishing well will look tiny compared to the trees but is able to hold its own. This grabs your attention and makes the wishing well look like it could almost still be in use. Imagine how inspired children will be when they go out to play in the garden and see a whimsical wishing well. Hours of games are sure to revolve around the mysticism that this item holds. Most wishing wells that you can buy today have no water and are mere decoration. Yet, some models of wishing wells come with a functioning crank handle and bucket, and still others have fountains in them for the pleasant sound of running water. These options add to the elements of fantasy and imagination.

Another trick is to nestle the wishing well in a corner of your garden and complement it with a nearby bench. In a smaller garden the wishing well will draw a lot of attention and add some interest and depth.

Adding a wishing well to your garden is inexpensive and creative. It will instantly change the feel of the garden and become a place you love which inspires peaceful solitude and relaxation. If you are lucky enough to have an actual old well, don't hide or ignore it, make it the highlight of your landscape and add plantings that complement it. Your garden will become unique with the addition of a wishing well and will inspire a more romantic and fantastical garden. Wishing wells are as timeless as the fairy tales that they are so prominently featured in. Sit by your own wishing well and create your own "happily ever after." See what a wishing well will do for your life and your garden and all your wishes are sure to come true.

Your Own Hall Of Fame

Collecting sports memorabilia is an excellent investment as well as a fashionable way to decorate a room in one's home. Whether you are an avid sports fan or one who only watches the big games, there are few better ways of impressing family and friends than with a room solely dedicated to sports. Having many major sports ranging from NASCAR to baseball to football to hockey in the United States, it couldn't be easier, right?

Well, that may not be the case. Certain items are extremely hard to come by and may cost a lot of money. If you are looking for an autographed Babe Ruth baseball, it will be difficult to find since he is no longer alive. Therefore, someone looking for Ruth's autograph will be paying upwards of $10,000. However, if you have the means, it shouldn't stop you from getting a prized piece of sports history for the home. You can always tell your wife it's an investment for the future. (If your wife isn't buying that answer, I guess you are out of luck.) There are many autographs varying in price to be acquired from all the major sports.

Autographs are probably the best way to impress others. Signed photos of the best athletes in the world can be hung on walls, as can autographed jerseys. Autographed baseballs, footballs, hockey pucks, basketballs, and so on can be displayed in cases on a shelf. And if you make the shelf yourself, not only will the autographs be a treat for your friends, but your craftsmanship will surely blow them away. I'm proud of the autographed photos I have hanging on my bedroom wall, even if they are crooked.

However, autographs can be very tricky. There are some dealers today that may sell fake autographs. To ensure you are buying a real autograph, it is worthwhile to find a sports dealer you can trust. I've built a relationship with a dealer named Steve or "Doctor D." Yet, some people may prefer to buy from well-known auction houses such as Grey Flannel Auctions in Westhampton Beach.

For those of you who want to use the sports memorabilia you already have, an interesting idea for people who have more sports cards than they know what to do with would be to purchase a stylish piece of metal and hang the cards on the wall. However, before you go ruining your Sidney Crosby rookie card that may one day pay for your child's college education, make sure to protect the cards. A way that would work well would be to purchase cardholders and then stick magnetic strips on the back of the holders. Slip the cards in the holders and after lining everything up, you will have filled a pretty unique space on the wall. More importantly, those cards that have been sitting in old boxes and haven't been seen in years can now be viewed.

The reason for making a sports room shouldn't only be for others, it should first and foremost be for your own enjoyment. When I think of enjoyment, I think of saving money. A less expensive option, and ideal for a kid's room, would be to buy hats and hang them up on nails along the wall. If you are a baseball fan, go out and buy a hat from every team. If your child has a number of hats on his or her own, then hang up your kid's hats. Another fun idea for children would be to cut out pictures of their favorite players from magazines and make a collage. If that is too time consuming, posters of super star athletes can be hung on the walls instead.

Now that the basis for the room has been set, get the proper supplies to protect your valuables. After all, an autographed football isn't going to hold its value if it is sitting around and collecting dust. And don't leave any signed baseballs around that are not in a case because the cleaning lady may think they are dirty and wipe the signatures right off the ball. In all seriousness, decorating a room filled with sports memorabilia can be a very valuable investment down the line.

ESPN had a commercial, which asks, "Without sports, how would we write our history?" However, after this article, the saying may better be served by asking, without sports, how would we decorate our homes?

Stacking And Storing Without Buddha's Help

I love my things. Things are great. The more things I have the happier I am. I don't practice the Buddhist idea of detaching oneself from one's things nor do I really want to and I'm not about to begin pretending that I'm Buddhist. In fact, if I'm detached from my things, I actually become unhappier. And it's not because I'm vain or care about the perception others have of me or that I'm bored by conversations with others or myself, for that matter. Rather, my obsession for "things" is born from an elation I have for ideas; their creation, discovery, embrace and ultimate rejection. The things I love, musical instruments, books, films, and albums, have all been formed from the inate human desire to create!

But lately my love of ideas and " things" has begun to clutter my mind and my bedroom. And in my ongoing search for daylight among a material darkness, my loved ones have taught me a few key organizational techniques.

Working in baby steps is instrumental in overcoming a large task like organizing a room. Like Bob Wiley says in What about Bob?, "Baby steps to four o'clock. Baby steps to four o'clock." Don't try to clean your entire room at once because, most likely, if you take everything out to organize it you're going to end up leaving everything out. This was my first mistake. I emptied the contents of my closet, which held several hundred back issues of Rolling Stone, Thrasher and Highlights magazines from my childhood, and cleared off the thousands of uncased CDs which rested on a broken subwoofer, tossing everything into the center of my room. I then realized that I had made a horrid mistake as I collapsed over my things in an attempt get to the door to escape my ambitious misery. When dealing with magazines and newspapers, making a scrapbook of articles you've enjoyed will eliminate the need to hold onto copious amounts of magazine back-issues. If you have a lot of LPs, try using a tall shelf unit to hold your music. If you're obsessed with movies like me, and have to own as many Criterion Collections DVDs as possible, these wall units will help you organize and catalogue your library of celluloid indulgence.

In the northeast corner of my bedroom, which is a humble 15'x15', two guitars, a bass and "two stringed instruments which I don't even know what they are," as my girlfriend said, sadly lay against each other like unwanted puppies at a pet shop. Several of them are beginning instruments my uncle gave me and aren't even string-able anymore. Which leads me to my next thought. If you can't fix it or fit in it, don't keep it. Donate it! Some people, like my brother, cringe at the idea of having someone else wear their clothes. But it's not like they're borrowing them to shovel horse manure! You're not asking for them back!

And since my interests have generally remained the same over the years, the gifts I've gotten have become progressively ideal, leaving me with different stages of similar items-like an old classical guitar, and more recently, a beautiful Jumbo bodied Epiphone acoustic. So it has been proposed that every time I receive a new gift, I donate an old one. This is an amazing way to get rid of things (it feels good on the conscience, too).

More extreme measures have been suggested such as color coding my sock drawer or having matching hangers for all my shirts. But if you're like me, matching socks or even wearing socks is a challenge in the morning, and who needs clothes hangers when you have four bedposts? Am I wrong?

Many of you know an office or desk can be an epicenter for disorganization, so try going through your mail daily, and eliminate unwanted paper waste. Shred what you don't need and file what is current and important.

Even though I love my things, getting rid of some of them has proven to be a very cathartic experience and I suggest doing so if you ever feel overwhelmed or stagnant in your life. But as far as my things go, I can think of a thousand reasons why keeping a typewriter without a functional period key is worth it. James Joyce for one...

Cleaning Is For The Dogs

Dog is man's best friend. And women are pretty fond of their furry friends as well. Cats, too, are often times well loved members of families...but all too often dander, fur-balls, and dog hair come with these precious friends – and they are less than welcome.

A few tips for keeping your house minimally affected by your pets can help keep your summer home fresh, clean, and airy.

Prevention is a big part of a healthy and pet-friendly house. Distract your cat from being tempted to sharpen nails on a couch or upholstery by providing an area set aside purely for the animals. A cat scratch post is a must.

To keep dogs from tearing apart the home, be sure that your pet is allowed at least two times a day to be outside and either be walked or have some other way to allow outside activities. This gives them an opportunity to get rid of a lot of energy that would cause havoc if released indoors. A tip for puppies – be very sure that your new pet has not been taken from its mother prematurely. Very often puppies that are moved into a new home too early will not have/had the needed time with an older dog to learn some softer "manners" and will forever be an easily excited dog – making it very difficult to break bad and destructive habits. Also, be sure that you allow your pet plenty of time with you – dogs need attention and might show you in some "unfun" ways how much you are missed.

Cats and dogs tend to spend more time outdoors in the warmer weather, which means they track in a bit more sand, dirt, and grass, and you'll need to spend some extra time cleaning the evidence of their adventures. Dogs can be trained to wipe their feet, and this makes a fun party trick to show off to friends. Cats, on the other hand, are not as easy to trick into this domestically-friendly action, but cats enjoy being brushed and a quick rub with a towel can clean the muddy paws of your furry friends.

Another tip; limit the area indoors that you allow your pets to have full access to. Don't allow your cats and dogs free rein over your house – or you'll spend way too much of your free time following them around, trying to minimize the evidence of their indoor adventures.

If you do want to allow your pets a few items of furniture to rest comfortably on, keep a slip cover or sheet between them and their resting place to reduce mess making and to make clean up easier. Also, if you simply can't or won't break your cat or dog from the habit of sleeping on a particularly comfy sofa or chair; then do a bit of scent reduction later; sprinkle corn starch, talcum powder, or baking soda on the upholstery and leave there for a few hours before vacuuming. Any of these three will greatly reduce odor as they are particularly absorbent.

Once dogs are housetrained, unless they are sick or very old, you shouldn't have much of a worry about them making that sort of a mess indoors – but training your dog to "go" in a particular area will lower the chance of embarrassing yourself and your guest during a tour of the backyard garden. Interesting enough, dogs themselves prefer a bit of privacy – and often can be easily trained to use a less conspicuous area. If you have an indoor cat, keep your litter box in the basement. I recommend a self-cleaning machine, but would even more strongly suggest having a cat that is indoor/outdoor and keeping their messes outside the home.

Brushing your pets regularly – outside, of course – will also help lessen the amount of hair that they lose inside the house. Your local pet store will have a wide selection of brushes, and a store clerk can help you find the ideal type for your pet.

If you are going to allow your pet the freedom to travel where they want in the house, I will still urge you to keep a guest bedroom "pet-free." You yourself may not have any pet allergies, but to be hospitable to visitors, you should keep a room clean of your pets.

Following these simple tips will help keep your house clean and healthy even with your furry friends at home with you.

For The Love Of Rabbits

One St. Patrick's Day, when I was in college, I traded in my boyfriend for a rabbit. I had gone out to buy a pair of black boots and came home with a bunny. The shoe shop had no boots in my size, but the pet store next door was filled with plenty of tiny baby bunnies. I picked a small grey one that sat in the food bowl from which it ate.

That evening, my boyfriend watched the rabbit hop unsurely around the cage I had snapped together on the kitchen table. "It's going to make your room smell," he said, his thick hoodie leaking heavy cigarette smoke onto my desk and curtains and carpet.

The next day I called my parents. This was our conversation: "I dumped So-and-So and bought a rabbit." "A rabbit?" "Yeah. I went for shoes but they were out of sevens." "Your father is shaking his head. Here, talk to him."

My father got on the phone and listed the ways in which my apartment would be chewed, soiled, and filled with fur and bad smells, but I think he was just relieved that I had dumped So-and-So, and so he didn't push it. Still, I heeded his warning and took precautions to bunny-proof my apartment. These are some of them.

1.) Potty train your bunny. At first I scoffed at the plastic triangular litter boxes in the pet store, thinking they were marketed solely to the type of people who wrote Christmas cards in the first person voice of their cat. Then I bought some carpet cleaner and changed my mind. This is how I went about potty training Bunny: I always kept the litter box near my rabbit, in the cage when Bunny was and out when he was out. If he went on the floor, I picked him up and placed him in the litter box, even if he was done. Any collateral droppings I scooped up with a kid's sand shovel and put in the box. I positioned pieces of hay next to the box so that he'd have to climb inside to reach them. I read to do this because rabbits like to multitask. There were periods of doubt during which I had visions of signing my Christmas card "Sprinkles" with a pen-drawn paw print above it. But then I noticed that the cage floor, and my floor, were becoming more and more absent of tiny black dots every day and I relaxed.

Potty training does several things: It allows you to let your bunny out of its cage without sacrificing your carpet. It makes your mother more inclined to let you bring your bunny into her house over Christmas. Most importantly, it makes your house smell less because the litter box is easier to clean more often than a large wire or wood cage. You can remove the litter box from the cage, dump it out, maybe wipe it with one of those Clorox wipes, add new wood shavings, and stick it back in the cage.

2.) Keep the kitchen chairs pushed in under the table or your bunny will use them as steps to jump up on the table into your roommate's guacamole.

3.) Hide all wires. Pin them up, run them under the carpet, or tuck them behind furniture. Rabbits, though significantly cuter, share rodents' need to chew. I bought Bunny several wood toys to chew on instead of my wires and table legs, but he was more taken with the straw bristle broom in the closet. My roommates and I were happy someone made use of it.

4.) Put sheets over your couches when your rabbit sheds. I also used a not-too-sticky lint roller on Bunny to remove the excess fur. The ASPCA probably does not condone this, but Bunny wriggled like he does when he's enjoying being petted.

5.) Buy a leash. I had lived twenty years without realizing that people made leashes for hamsters and rabbits. I put one on Bunny so I could walk him to give him his exercise, but still keep him off my Mother's oriental carpets. It let Bunny travel more comfortably, too; he walked the deck of several Long Island ferries with me instead of having to be stuffed in a box in the car.

In the end, I spent about a year each with my ex-boyfriend and my rabbit. I cleaned up many messes with both. But when I dumped my boyfriend, I bought a t-shirt that had "SINGLE!" written on it in glittery letters and wore it everywhere. When I watched Bunny drive away with his adopted family just before graduation, I cried soft, fond tears and waited a day before I vacuumed up the last bits of hay from the rug.

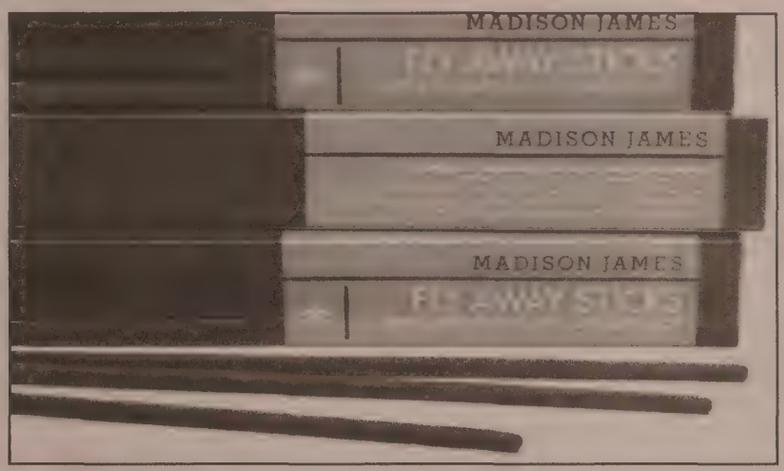
Madison James: The Scent Of The Summer



The recipe for the perfect outdoor party: mix friends and family, hors d'oeuvres, wine, and Fly Away Sticks. Stir with a gentle breeże...

Mosquitoes have arrived this season on the East End. Finally, there is chic relief. Madison James Fly Away Sticks are orange citronella scented sticks that repel uninvited mosquitoes and other flying pests that want a piece of the East End social scene. They are the fresh alternative to candles and are perfect for clambakes, garden parties, beach blanket fetes, and the backyard barbecues.

Fly Away Sticks are now the mandatory outdoor accessory wherever family and friends are gathered on sultry summer evenings. The sleek nineteen-inch stick is the perfect size to insert into flower pots, sand, or the ground and is easy to use. The Fly Away Stick was inspired by outdoor Southern entertaining. Growing up in Kentucky, founder Madison James wanted to continue the historically rich traditions of Southern hospitality in her new chic environment – the East End of Long Island and other Northeastern beach and country-home hamlets.

With endless entertaining, she realized that the threat of pesky pests could ruin a perfect evening. Citronella candles were messy, and their smell overpowering. Rather than having guests apply smelly spray repellants, she decided to come up with an alternative. Enter the inception of the company's signature product, Fly Away Sticks and orange scented citronella.

She left the fashion industry to research and develop her new concept, and formed the company, Madison James Inc., in New York's flower market, developing products that "bring people together for great conversations and traditions."

Knowing that packaging design communicates much about a company, Madison sought out a designer with fragrance packaging experience and found it in Alan Castro, an art director and packaging designer who has worked on projects for Gucci fragrance, Oscar de la Renta fragrance, Zegna fragrance, and Victoria's Secret. "I am also from the South so I grew up with women like Madison, women with a love of entertaining. But what I love about Madison is that she's taken her traditional Kentucky background and blended it with her Manhattan lifestyle. So when discussing the brief, we were completely in sync with the idea that this traditional packaging have a clean, modern look." Castro added, "She also brought an infectious enthusiasm to her project that swept me along."

The appeal of the product goes beyond packaging and the perfection in which it repels nasty pests; clients are raving about its orange citronella scent.

Madison James Fly Away Sticks are now the must-have product for the sophisticated and stylish tent socials of New York City's outdoor charity events where she first launched the signature scent. She received great reviews when her product effectively kept out airborne party crashing pests. And it's the first choice for wine tastings and food events because it doesn't interfere with flavors.

Shannon Cooney Johnston, who handles media relations for Kiehl's Skin Care and Grooming Company, says of Fly Away Sticks, "I've used them in the country in North Carolina and they make the party." Madison James relates to the diverse needs of her clientele. "Fly Away Sticks started out on Fifth Avenue and have found their way to the 7th Avenue floral market, traditional hardware stores, sought-after garden nurseries, farmers' markets, a vineyard in California, and all the way back to the racing stables at Belmont and Saratoga where H.Tesher, a horse trainer, has been using them for horsefly protection. "The horses' owners like them so much they've been taking them home for entertaining on the East End." Madison James Inc. plans to develop an endless array of fresh must-have products that enhance the traditions of simplicity in entertaining with a thoroughly modern style. The city's flower market provides a colorful and diverse background for Madison James to continue to create with her signature style. Don't be forced to take your party inside. Reclaim your backyard, and protect your pets too, with Fly Away Sticks. (Remember: Mosquitoes are more than just a nuisance; they are carriers of West Nile virus and other diseases.) Madison James gave us a product you will want to entertain with all summer long. Fly Away Sticks retail for $15 for 10 sticks Available at Takashimaya, Fisher & Page, Floralia Decorators, Waldorf Astoria, New York City, Marders, Thayer's Hardware & Patio, Bridgehampton; Village Hardware Store, East Hampton; Clamman, Southampton; Amagansett Farmers Market; and in select Whole Foods Market locations.

Flip'em & Fold'em

Futons are a popular alternative to the Full, Queen or King-size bed. They take up a lot less room, and give you the opportunity to decorate with slipcovers that enhance your room. They can fold up to function as a couch during the day, and open into a cozy bed at night. They are highly popular among the 20-somethings and are a must for any Hampton beach house. Expecting some overnight guests? Just pop out your futon and turn it into a bed.....instant relaxation and very little fuss.

American futons are loosely based on the Japanese-style futons, a thin mattress laid out on the floor at night and put in a closet during the day. Our futons differ in that we place ours on a structure and they are usually made of batting and foam. The typical Japanese futon is around 5 cm thick and is designed for Tatami flooring. Loving the Japanese concept, American furniture designers took it a few steps further, westernized it, and developed the functional futons that we find in stores today.

So you've decided that a futon is right for you. Now there are some questions to address. What room is it going in? Are you putting it in the TV room? Kids' room? Playroom? The front room of your beach house? Consider this when shopping for the futon. Certain styles fit particular rooms best.

Futons come in various sizes and styles and folds ranging from 5-7 feet on average. Styles differ greatly. For example, there is the bi-fold futon, which appears like a couch and the tri-fold futon, which gives more of an artsy appearance. You can choose to buy a futon that will turn into a twin bed or a king or a queen. (Why isn't there a Jack?) You can even get a chair with a matching Ottoman that can also turn right into a fun bed! Futon makers have thought of everything!

Finding a mattress for your futon is one of the most important details of your purchase. I'm chuckling as I write this because, ironically, my husband is watching the "Seinfeld" episode when Jerry and Elaine go to Florida to visit Jerry's parents and Elaine sleeps on the horrendous mattress and hurts her back. You don't want your life to turn into a Seinfeld episode and have your guests on your floor, writhing in pain because of a poor purchase on your end. After a good night's sleep on a quality futon mattress, they'll be up swimming laps in your pool or out on the tennis court having a good time, not laid up on Jerry's parents' floor as Elaine was.

According to Futonsnow.com, the original futon mattresses in the U.S. were actually handmade. Today, futon mattresses are manufactured and have popular names like Sealy Posturepedic and Eternity. If you've ever slept on either of these manufacturer's products, you know that you're in for a good night's sleep. The Sealy Posturepedic is composed of 11 layers of materials designed to comfort and essentially cradle your body while you get your Zs. This type of mattress is good for the futon user who expects to use it regularly. If you're going to use your futon more frequently as a couch and less as a bed, then you can purchase a mattress with more foam, like their Plush 8-inch mattress.

Cottonwood Home furnishings has some stylish futons that are really reasonably priced. I really liked the Chicago Futon Set, which sells for $507! The frame is made of a beautiful oak wood and the print that it is sold in is a subtle mosaic pattern that would look great in a Western inspired room. You can purchase a futon chair to go with it to complete the oak look in the room. The great thing about these futons is that they enhance the room, not hog it. You can put a cute coffee table in, a TV, a book shelf...literally anything you want and have tons more space than you would have had if there was a bed.

If you are a person who loves change, futons are always up for a little variety. Simply purchase the specially made covers which are much easier to put on, then a slipcover and voila, you've got a totally new look. They come in a variety of solids and prints, so mix them up and have a little fun.

Futons are a fun piece of furniture that can enhance any room in your house. Functionality and practicality make them a must for people who entertain or expect to have a houseful of summer guests. You can't go wrong with a futon!

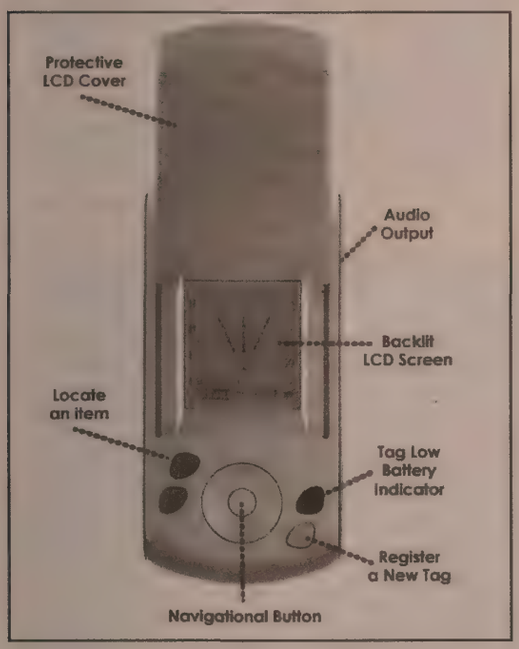
The Art Of Losing

Car keys, socks, lighters, pens, and kids – these things seem to have a mind of their own and always happen to be misplaced. If you're anything like me – actually like most of the rest of the world – you find it difficult to keep track of all your essential, daily possessions, 24-7. Losing things sucks. There is nothing worse than feeling helpless and aggravated as you sit at home in only your bathing suit bottom while the rest of your friends are off having a jolly good time at the beach, the only thing excluding you from this play-date being the fact that you can't find your bikini top for the life of you.

Hopefully, if you're this forgetful, your children are trained well enough so that they can find their way home in case they get lost, but car keys and bathing suit tops, unfortunately, do not have the legs to get from one place to another. Don't even think about trying to train your socks to come find you because they have no choice in the matter – the sock monster is what keeps them from remaining in pairs and then they are often lost forever. Alas, don't worry, the clever Brits across the Atlantic have thought of a genius gadget to solve all losers' problems (losers being people who lose things, not people that have no friends.....you'll have to figure that out yourself).



A tracking device for misplaced items actually exists! It is called the Loc8tor. Let's not add insult to injury; keep the Loc8tor in your pocket wherever you go, as I highly doubt you will ever find yourself in the position of losing your pants at a party while handbags are a lot easier to misplace.

As luck would have it, the Loc8tor resembles a slim cell-phone and can easily fit in any back pocket – careful to remember not to sit on it! It comes with two tags about the size of a postage stamp (19.5mm W x30.5mm H x 8.5mm and additional tags can be purchased) that you attach to your most-prized and most-often lost items (roaming children are a good surface to tag). With a range of 600 ft and five buttons, the Loc8tor can be used in several ways to find your stuff and put you within one inch of your misplaced items.

The first way to find your things is to press the button. With audio and visual prompts, you can follow the beeps on the LCD screen as if you are playing, "Where's the Thimble" or "Hot and Cold" (you know those games often played with grandmothers).

Another way to find things is to track an item. If it has moved out of the Loc8tor's 600 ft. range the lost item will start beeping until you are happily reunited. This option seems a bit drastic as it would be horribly annoying for your lost cosmetic mirror to beep loudly and unpleasantly in the ladies' powder room at the restaurant where you lunched earlier, but you can set the tracking to near, medium, or far so that it won't beep for long (or you can choose to be annoying – your choice).

The Loc8tor Plus is out there for you either very paranoid folks or very forgetful knuckleheads. The Loc8tor Plus comes with three regulars tags and one Panic tag. Panic tags have an additional button that allows a child to press in panic and activate an alert sequence (whatever that means). The Panic tag can also be used by a forgetful parent or babysitter to keep a wandering child within your desired range of the Loc8tor, kind of like a dog's electric fence, but minus the electric shock and with a vibrating alarm on the Loc8tor.

Sounds too good to be true, right? Well, kind of. The Loc8tor won't be coming out till October 2006, but I know I will be counting the days when I can purchase my own Loc8tor and never have to worry about losing my wallet again! Check it out at http://loc8tor.com/ and in the meantime, good luck this summer counting in August the same number of beach towels you started with in June.

Dan's HOME Guide

Showering In The Sun

If you're reading this home guide in the hopes of making your house a swanky, summer pad then you definitely need an outdoor shower. "Outdoor showers are great!" exclaimed a friend of mine when I told her I would be writing about them and I completely agree – I love outdoor showers.

One of my favorite things about my house in the summers is that I get to take an outdoor shower every day! I never have any reason to think about getting clean indoors when showering can be an almost spiritual experience outside.

I have to take my outdoor showers once it's dark because the genius that constructed the outdoor shower at my house made the wooden sidings a bit too short to hide from peeping toms. Nevertheless, in the same way that skinny-dipping in the ocean feels like swimming in velvet and sunbathing au naturel feels liberating, you can't beat this simple and natural way to get clean.

Some people get scared away from outdoor showers. It can be intimidating when the floor is littered in pine needles or summer bugs, so if you haven't built yours yet, I'd advise finding a location that is tree-free and preferably in the sun. Some people also think outdoor showers are only for showering after the beach – you know, getting the sand off your feet so you don't get the house all messy. Not true. It's beautiful to be able to look around at something other than white tiles and foggy glass when you're in the shower. I swear, once you shower with the world around, perhaps with a wandering deer passing through your yard, you'll never want to go inside again.

The different types of outdoor showers are as numerous as the people that use them. Some have hot water, some don't. I actually like to have an outdoor shower on the colder side, unless it's a particularly cool night, because a) it is very refreshing and b) cold water makes your hair shinier. But don't think that temperature is the only factor in determining whether an outdoor shower is primitive or uber fancy. Many boat and camping folk love the plastic bag shower or sun shower. These are basically bags of water that have a showerhead. They get heated by the sun, making it possible to have a warm shower anywhere. Wouldn't it be cool to shower at the summit of a mountaintop or in the middle of the ocean after a salty day at sea?

If I'm convincing you how great outdoor showers are and you're thinking of adding one to your summer shack and want to make it fancy, you're in luck because I have seen some very cool outdoor showers. Some people like those huge shower heads that send a rainstorm of water down on you; though not the most water-conserving option, it sure feels nice to stand naked in the "rain," when it's sunny out. Barriers between you and the nosy neighbor are not even necessary. It's your yard, shower wherever you want to, but siding to hide behind in your outdoor shower can also open up a large door to decorative options. Teak siding can give your shower a native feel and of course there's classic wood paneling to match your Hampton shingled cottage. If you're fortunate enough to have a nice view on your property, setting up your shower with a panoramic landscape is great because showering while looking out at the ocean is one of the coolest things you can do, I think.

If you're unable to picture the endless possibilities that the world of outdoor showers holds, here's my suggestion for you, interested reader. Next time you're pool-hopping or star-stalking out here on the East End, check out the pool house for an outdoor shower. Heck, don't just look, hop in and take one if no one's around. Take some showers that are enclosed or open, hot or cold, strong water pressure or weak (even though I don't know why you'd want weak water pressure). You might as well shop around before you make such a big decision. But, whatever you do, please take my advice and make your summer and life 100% better by taking an outdoor shower. Every day and every night.

GEORGE DOES WHAT?

Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it.

I never kept it a secret.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

At very competitive prices.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance.

We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

Now you know, and I feel better."

Projecting The Perfect Image

Everyone loves their home entertainment systems – cozying up to a good movie on a rainy day would not be the same in front of a simple TV. But, some living rooms become overwhelmed by an unsightly big screen television. Having a TV at the foot of one's bed is another popular option for relaxing at the end of the day, but a hulking black box and tangle of wires not only takes up a lot of space in your bedroom but also will ruin whatever décor you have in your room. Now, a much more romantic, aesthetic, and versatile system is available for your home entertainment needs. Home projectors are becoming very popular and more affordable. Imagine what your living room, bedroom, and home theater would look like if there wasn't any evidence that you had one at all.

Projectors offer some major advantages over a big screen television system. They are, generally speaking, less expensive than a sizeable TV and much more portable. You can discretely mount a projector in one room or easily move it from room to room – or even outdoors. A projector can be plugged into any device that uses video cables such as a DVD player, VCR, personal computer, video game system, TV, or a camcorder.

There are many creative ways to use a projector in your home – projectors are not just used for business meetings anymore. A projector completes the movie-watching experience. It makes every seat in your home a part of the front row at the cinema. To make a home theater you will need to consider things such as light and sound quality. I suggest that you paint your theater room a dark color to enhance the effect of the projector. I, personally, think a deep red is the most appealing choice for theater walls. It reminds me of the red carpet and red velvet rope. You will also need to control the light in the room as uncontrolled light will really damage the image that your projector will put out.. This can involve choosing a room without big windows or direct sunlight, or by hanging heavyweight curtains.

In the bedroom, you can custom-build a headboard to house your projector and you can aim the projector at the wall at the foot of your bed and snuggle up to watch movies with someone special. One great idea is to project a film straight up onto the ceiling, lying flat on your back and relaxing while you watch.

The convenience of the projector lies in its versatility. The image can be made to be almost any size and the system takes up very little space. Imagine your next Super Bowl party with the game projected onto a giant screen or even covering the entire wall. No more huddling around a TV or fighting over who gets the good seats. Everyone will be able to see the game while milling around, grabbing a snack, or chatting with friends. A big boxing match or even something like The Academy Awards can be turned into an occasion to gather with friends if you have a projector. You can have an old-fashioned drive-in movie at any time or even a movie pool party for a child's birthday. If you don't want to buy a projector screen you can make one fairly easily from a white sheet. Set it up next to the pool and let the kids float round on rafts just as the sun goes down. I recommend showing Finding Nemo to inspire some creative pool play.

Projectors can simply plug into any computer, so if you want to sit on your couch while you surf the web on a screen as big as your wall, you can now. I am sure that the idea of playing a favorite video game with life-size characters projected on the wall appeals to many readers. You can use a projector to create a unique decoration or mood for a party or bring back the old tradition of a family slide show.

Consider a projector when making your home entertainment choices. Consider its many benefits and creative uses and I'm sure you will realize that a home projector is the right choice for you. Your home will become so popular, you may have to start charging admission!

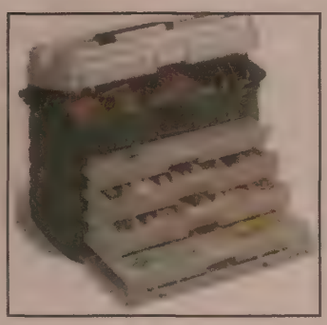
Taking The Bait



It seems that every summer flies by in a flurry of work, parties, and hangovers – usually in that order. Before I know what has happened, it's September and I haven't spent nearly enough much time doing the things I love. For me, this is fishing. When I was ten, getting up at 5 a.m. on a Sunday to fish with my dad was easy, exciting, and a weekly occurrence. I am still up at 5 a.m. most Sunday mornings, but usually walking home from a bar. I am too busy and I miss fishing. But I have a solution: the tackle box.

I have come to terms with the fact that my busy and spontaneous lifestyle is not going to change any time soon (not that I want it to just yet), and have decided that I will need to integrate fishing back into it. This will involve being ready to fish at any time, and that will require the perfect, well-organized tackle box.

On a rainy day in June, I set myself up on the floor of my garage, surrounded by boxes and boxes of lures, leaders, and line. I began selecting my favorite lures and necessary items. What I have, actually, is not a tackle box, but a tackle bag. It is a far cry from the overgrown lunchboxes that tackle boxes used to resemble. This heavy-duty, structured canvas bag is lightweight and has both a short handle and a long one to allow hands free carrying if you sling it over your shoulder. The best advantage of the tackle bag is that you can put different lures in the interchangeable hard plastic cases and switch them in and out easily. In a minute you can go from bluefish tackle to striped bass tackle.

You'll need all the basics in your tackle box, including a good set of pliers. I have a great, old pair of pliers that I'll never get rid of. They are the kind surgeons use in hospitals; they are long and thin and bent at a perfect angle that really makes removing hooks easier. I like to pack a thick glove if I'm going to be handling a lot of bluefish, which I usually am, regardless of what I'm actually trying to catch. I know that if a big bluefish really wanted to take off my finger, a glove is not going to stop him, but it makes me feel a little better to wear it anyway. Keep a cheap disposable camera in your tackle box all summer. Now your tall tales will have photographic proof. You'll also want a knife to cut your line if it gets tangled and plenty of your favorite types of lures.

I almost always fish with poppers or plugs because I love when a fish hits a lure on the surface. No matter how long I fish, I will always find that splash and tug on my line thrilling. When I am setting up my tackle box, I take some time and clip off two of the hooks on a treble hook or replace the treble hook with a single hook. This makes unhooking your fish so much easier and you will still catch just as many. Make sure to bring plenty of replacement lures because you hopefully you will be lucky enough to have a monster fish fight hard enough to break your line and swim away with your favorite fifteen dollar lure. If you are not sure what the best lures are for your area, look to see what other fishermen and fisherwomen are using or go to your local tackle shop and ask for advice.

So much technology and tackle is available to fishermen and fisherwomen that it is easy to become overwhelmed. Pack your tackle box like you would pack your suitcase for a vacation, bringing only what is necessary and only your favorite articles. Don't let yourself get weighed down by a lot of extra gear or you will defeat the purpose of the easy "grab and go" tackle box.

If you take some time to get your tackle box well organized and ready to go, you can bring it with you anywhere, keep it in the car wherever you go, or grab it and head to the beach or boat on a whim. If you make fishing less of a production with less prep time, you can get quick little trips in throughout the day. I keep my tackle box and rod in the car so that when I ride the South Ferry every day to work I can stop and fish if I get inspired and have enough time.

I encourage everyone to try and incorporate the things you love back into your busy life. There is always a way to make time for your passion. I think that I will start taking my tackle box out to those bars on Saturday night – walking home at 5 a.m. seems like the perfect time to stop for a little fishing. Maybe I'll catch breakfast.

Home Staging Sells

Do you have a home for sale? Are you wondering what you can do to make it sell faster or for a better price?

Staging is the art of styling a property to increase its market value and give it a competitive edge in today's real estate market. The point of staging is to inspire a positive reaction immediately. Why is this important? Because most prospective homebuyers make their decision about a house in the first 30 seconds!

Staging is not the same as interior design, which focuses on one particular client's lifestyle and taste. Staging is just the opposite! Staged houses must appeal to as wide a range of people as possible, like a model home. Stagers may design your house in a very different way than you have decorated it, because part of the design strategy is to remove a homeowner's personal imprint. It may still feel like home to you, but, in fact, the minute you decide to sell your house, it stops being your home and becomes a commodity on the market.

Other differences between staging and interior design are timing and cost. Stagers do not have the luxury of taking as much time as they want to decorate the home, because a seller needs to get the house on the market. A good stager will size up the situation, make repairs as required, move out what doesn't work, use what does, and/or provide temporary furniture and furnishings quickly and cost effectively. No custom drapery or special order couches here! What we want is a return on your investment, the good news being that the average rate of return is approximately $2-3 for every dollar spent.

So does staging work? According to the New York Times "... 17 out of 25 staged homes sold within seven days and the rest within 30 days. All were at or above asking price....." The Wall Street Journal states, "Staging speeds up sales in a sluggish market and can bump up prices 2% to 10% in a moderate market." And according to data from Coldwell Banker, staged homes in the San Francisco Bay area spent just 25.3 days on the market and sold at the asking price, while "non-staged" homes languished on the market for 48.2 days and sold for 2% below the asking price.

In a perfect world, a house should be staged before it is ever presented to the public. Remember, you only get one chance to make a good first impression. If your house has been on the market for a while without selling, it may be advisable to take it off before it gets "stale" or develops a lasting negative impression. Stage it, and then put it back on, as if for the first time.

What can you do yourself? Start with decluttering. Take out anything that is personal, religiously oriented, or overstuffed. Organize your closets. Get rid of dirty or damaged furniture. Repair leaky faucets, loose railings, or broken hinges. If you smoke, have pets, or cook curry on a regular basis, make sure there are no odors that may put off someone who doesn't share your interests. Clean, clean, clean, until everything shines, especially in the bathrooms and kitchen.

One thing you shouldn't do is lower the price, unless it is completely unrealistic. Many buyers who see a house labeled "Reduced" or "Price lowered" immediately think "What's wrong with it?" It's like the sale rack at Filene's Basement. Nobody wanted that stuff either. Statistics show it is more effective to raise your level of presentation than to lower a property's asking price.

What are the Top 5 Benefits of Home Staging?

Staged homes generally sell faster and at a higher price.

Staged houses feel better than empty ones.

Buyers, appraisers, and inspectors see staged homes as well maintained properties

Your house will be set apart from others on the market.....in a good way.

You won't have to lower your price if you raise the level of your presentation.

A staged home will always have an advantage over a non-staged home in today's real estate market. It is a business decision for anyone who wants to present their properties in the best possible light to facilitate faster sales at higher prices.

After all, "presentation is everything."

Staging is done by BF Designs, Inc. which offers hourly consultations through Full Service Staging and can be reached by telephone at, 631-267-5335 and on the at, notjustanotherprettyspace.com.

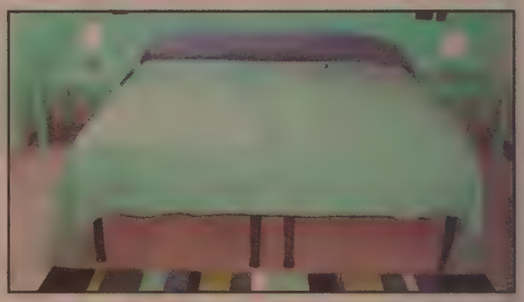
Dan's HOME Guide

The Color Of Cool

The dog days of summer are upon us; the sun and the heat are most definitely here.

Changing some details on the interior decorations of your home won't change the actual temperature indoors (that is what central air is for), but it can help to soothe and cool things off psychologically. There is an entire branch in the field of psychology that deals with how one's environs affects life, activity, and attitudes – aptly named Environmental Psychology. The field's findings appeal to businesses; making workers more productive and comfortable in the office, and to homeowners; where countless things can be responsible for big changes in how people feel at home.

Color has often been associated with moods, so for the summer's heat I suggest cool colors like blues, greens, and light purples. Try toned downed versions of these colors – sea blue, pale green, or lavender. Accenting the bedroom with these cool shades slows things down and relaxes the mind. Blues are known for making a space seem larger – a nice effect in muggy weather and they also tend to quiet a room. Use lavender in the bedroom or bathroom – in fact, get yourself a flowering lavender plant, as the scent is also a known aromatherapy relaxing agent.



Avoid bright oranges at this time of year. Those daring enough sometimes like bright reds to wake up a room, but you should avoid waking up a bedroom or den. Instead, keep red to the kitchen or children's playroom and far from resting rooms. Beiges and light browns are fine to use, but don't overdo it – too much of these neutral colors can tire and bore the eyes.

Also, use cool fabrics. Of course the flannel was packed away months ago, but Egyptian cotton, on the other hand, can be a refreshing fabric as it tends to cool easily and remains that way throughout the night, unlike heavier cotton blends. Linen is a fabric to wear in warmer weather, but also consider using it for table cloths, napkins, even curtains, as an alternative to heavier materials.

Use soft lights and avoid yellow bulbs – they can be very irritating to already sun-tired eyes at the end of the day. Instead, use white or blue iridescent lamps as they are much more soothing. In fact, white and blue lights are most similar to natural lighting and are the best type of light for the human eye.

Try to minimize noise because with heat and humidity rising, it wouldn't be wise to encourage a bad temper with too much loud and irritating sound. Be sure that if you must use fans you purchase ones with quiet motors. Mimic natural winds by opening a window on one side of the bed and placing a fan on the other to allow for cross breeze and more ventilation – a great way to help aid sleep on warm nights.

Decorate with citrus fruits. Green limes and yellow lemons are a refreshing addition to a centerpiece in the kitchen or on a sun porch. Put about a half dozen in a clear glass bowl. Use fresh flowers as well – summer roses in pink, white, and yellow are lovely ways to keep your bathrooms crisp and bright.

Don't be afraid to add more potted flowers to the interior of your house. Large houseplants will work wonders at replenishing the oxygen in your home and a few choice tropical plants will distract one from the outside humidity. But be careful not to overdo things – too many plants will clutter a space and will exhaust an already tired mind very quickly.

Think, "less is more" – keep tones cool and stay with simple designs. Use solid-colored sheets and towels to promote a fresh, clean feeling in your guest rooms. If, however, you are addicted to prints, keep them soft – perhaps a light floral print or some other simple design.

Also, reexamine your artwork. Dark oil paintings are not for the summer, but lighter watercolors and pencil drawings are ideal from June through September. Keep the theme of the work light as well – boating and other water activities are great subjects.

Be sure to empty your house of too many unnecessary knick-knacks or winter items. The rusty ice skates that you hang in the foyer in December don't work in August – replace them with an old wooden tennis racket (if you replace it all), but also try to leave bare wall space as often as possible – relaxing and simple, that is the major theme to keep your summer house cool.

Fishless Bowls

Once when I was eight I found myself in goldfish limbo. Splotchzinia and Goldzinia (because one had spots and one was solid gold) had died and Mom and Dad were tired of trips to the pet store. So, I went into the basement, got out the empty goldfish bowl, and searched for something else with which to fill it. I lined the bottom of the bowl with the same yellow gravel that my fish used to swim over when they were alive. Then I filled the bowl with water. My new bowl looked like a minimalist home of an invisible goldfish. Then I got the idea to take the shells that I had collected during summers spent on Hampton beaches and put them in the bowl. So now I had water, gravel, and shells. I added the vinyl figurine of a mermaid princess that had topped a recent birthday cake and put the bowl on my desk. It looked like something from an old, low-budget movie. My mother's sense of design could not tolerate such a tacky, pointless attempt at decorating, and she made me return the bowl to the basement.

The goldfish bowl may have been banished to the basement, but my interest in decorating with fishbowls, with or without fish, was not. Fishbowls are a striking alternative to floral arrangements or other mantle pieces, knick-knacks, and decorative items.

A goldfish bowl placed on a desk can be therapeutic. A gracefully swirling fin can be a calming thing to watch when you look up from typing a weighty report or balancing the checkbook.

Try putting your pet fish in an alternative container. Forego the standard, round goldfish bowl for an oversized flower vase or a large hurricane lamp glass. Square or rectangular vases are especially striking as they go against the expected round shape of fish bowls. Just be sure that the container, whatever the shape, is large enough for the fish to comfortably swim around in.

If cleaning tanks and sprinkling food flakes is more than you are willing to undertake, then forego the fish. You can find plenty of other things with which to fill a fishbowl. You can even update my eight-year-old shell idea. I would pass on the bright yellow gravel and the water, but a bowl filled to the brim with shells could make a lovely centerpiece for a summer table or a beach house coffee table. Experiment with shapes and colors. Try a bowl with all scallop shells or one filled completely with deep purple wampum pieces.

Of course, there are more than just shells. Colored glass marbles look understated and chic. They are common in many craft and home décor stores, and they come in a selection of colors, so you can pick ones that will suit your home's color scheme. These glass marbles are usually translucent and, therefore, look good placed in a window where the sun's rays can strike the marbles and cast a glow of color into the room.

If you care to use this decorating technique in the kitchen, I suggest complementing the nature of the space by sticking to somewhat domestic materials. A large fishbowl filled with corks looks warm yet sophisticated on the kitchen counter. You could use a fishbowl in place of a candy jar. (This would also work in the living room where you could use a smaller one in place of a candy dish on the coffee table.) A series of bowls in descending size could take the place of your flour, sugar, salt, and tea canisters. Make sure the fishbowls are unused though.

However, if you are not looking for a practical use and are just interested in using fishbowls for a purely aesthetic, and somewhat unorthodox, impact, I suggest choosing a material that suits a personal hobby. I have friends who collect pretty and usual bottle caps. They could fill a goldfish bowl with them and have it serve as an unconventional table topper.

And just as I suggested putting fish into a flower vase, you could go the opposite way and put flowers in fishbowls. Several small bowls (think the size you see at a carnival) each filled with a large blossom or two (think peony or dahlia or rose) would look stunning running down the length of your next dinner party table.

"Burlap and Book Pages" at Ashawagh Hall

"Dispatch 5," by Ray Colleran

"Red State," by Oliver Peterson

"Stardust Moods," by Oliver Peterson

If you think it's tough to get a table at a famed restaurant in East Hampton on a summer weekend, it is nothing compared to trying to show your artwork at the fabled Ashawagh Hall in Springs. In fact, there is only one day a year you can call to reserve the gallery space and it is in May. If you neglect to call very early in the morning, and don't continue calling until you get through to somebody, you will mostly likely miss out on becoming part of the history of this community center, which prides itself on being a showspace for artists with initiative.

Ashawagh Hall was built as a schoolhouse in 1847 and was used as such until 1908. In 1909, the building was purchased by the Springs Village Improvement Society and functioned as a village hall. But by mid-century, Springs had erupted into an artist's haven and Ashawagh Hall became the gallery space of choice, being down the road from Jackson Pollack and Lee Krasner's Fireplace Road home. Works were sold, money was raised, improvements were made, a curator appointed, and what we now know as the preeminent location for local artists to show their work was born.

According to a newsletter written by the East Hampton Artists Alliance, the foundation and the floors of Ashawagh Hall will be replaced next winter to combat the deterioration that inevitably comes with age. We can look forward to a refurbished space next spring.

Francine Fleischer, Oliver Peterson and Ray Colleran will be sharing those walls this weekend. All three are friends and in fact, Peterson and Colleran have shared studio space in the past. They have even collaborated. At Ashawagh Hall, however, they are showing work that is quite divergent.

Fleischer is a professional photographer with studios in Manhattan and Sag Harbor. Here she will be displaying still-lifes shot at night.

Colleran will be showing a series of pieces that are mixed media; paint and ink on paper. In this case, the "paper" is photocopied pages from a book called Dynamic America; a History of General Dynamics and its Predecessor Companies, which was published in 1960. General Dynamics supplies defense systems and weapons to the US Government and its allies, and this book was written as a pride piece, glorifying the achievements of the company and looking towards its rosy future. To these pages, Colleran adds his reactions to the subject matter of building bombs and the like, and his own ideas on success and achievement. The bold colors of his strokes over the dulled text, the layering of words and images, and combination of his ideals and the ideals of big business in 1960 make for very interesting and striking works.

Péterson is showing work that is a departure from what has become, perhaps inadvertently, a signature style that his collectors know – images dark in content, complex in execution and curious in meaning. At Ashawagh Hall, he is showing work that is more abstract, and of the sort of mixed media that is reminiscent of a Rauschenberg combine (adding a third dimension to a flat surface) rather than a collage, which is what he has often produced.

In "The Java Series," Peterson has included pieces of burlap sacks that once held coffee beans, along with sandpaper, newspapers, house paint, acrylic paint, and ballpoint ink on wood panel. The result is more soothing than the jumble of materials might insinuate, and the pieces are visually intricate without appearing difficult to live with.

In "Red State," contrasts abound. The implication of the political title along with the alarming hue of the field of color is tempered by the composition, which, with the wash of light shades and subtle floral paper, makes the piece surprisingly gentle. In "Stardust Moods," the color blocks are dynamic bursts of energy, yet the faded tones and the loose application add a softness. All in all, this work is accessible and pleasing to the eye. The sizes of the panels range from 8"x10" to 40"x50." A few of the pieces are in private collections and are being borrowed back for the show; the rest are for sale.

Titled "Burlap and Book Pages," the exhibition is July 21st-July 23rd from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., with a reception from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday the 22nd. The reception is sponsored by Wolffer Estate Vineyards and they will be pouring.

Stop by to check out what is inarguably the greatest thing about East Hampton – the legacy of art, artists and art lovers, and the bright future of the same.

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"ALBEE'S CHOICE" AT LONGHOUSE RESERVE

Last week's "Art Commentary" featured a sculpture show at the D'Amico House; currently a second outdoor display of sculpture also graces East Hampton's Longhouse Reserve. This time, the works were selected by playwright Edward Albee, and are located in a setting that constitutes another one of those well-kept Hampton secrets we only dream about. Like the D'Amico exhibit, it is an intriguing installation.

Once we can disengage ourselves from the Longhouse's extraordinary and lush ambience, complete with ponds filled with blown-glass balls, paths set off by colorful flowers and the unexpected sight of huge sculptures appearing around the bend, we find the amphitheater. A natural oval mound dug into the grass, it's the site of the Albee sculpture display, a particularly appropriate place relating its round shape with the many circular forms embraced by the sculptures themselves.

An intriguing example is Ned Smyth's "Last Supper," a work that assumes a potent meaning considering its title. Thus, the annular shapes set on a table become plates used by Christ and his disciples. Yet we immediately notice that the plates are not arranged in an organized fashion. Without the title, this piece would be a fine study in material and form. With the title, it is fine example of conceptual art.

"Last Supper," by Ned Smyth

Mia Westerlund Roosen's work is also circular, one huge resin and felt form featuring tears in the white fabric. Another endeavor celebrates cylindrical configurations, recalling barrels set atop each other. Their rust color contradicts the green grass upon which they are placed.

Willard Boepple's work is somewhat different, primarily because of its vertical shape, combining an unconventional configuration set atop a ladder-like form.

Conversely, there's Sol LeWitt's piece which is not part of the Albee exhibit. It's a powerful acrylic on fiberglass creation that stands by itself among the trees, a towering, vertical shape resembling a cathedral. The surrounding area provides a perfect setting for the sculpture as it reaches beyond the trees, stretching upward toward the sky in a spiritual gesture. It recalls a Lewitt show at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in August, 2005; the pieces sat on the Museum's rooftop, with Manhattan skyscrapers in the background. Those real skyscrapers looked like Lewitt's work in the Longhouse woods. What a remarkable comparison for such very different venues.

The current show at Longhouse will be on view throughout the summer. Call 631-329-3568 for hours.

preview: fireworks benefit

This Saturday, July 22nd, at 7 p.m., the East Hampton summer spectacular with fireworks by Grucci will take place on the Duke lawn. The property belonging to Tony and Luly Duke is located at 178 Springy Banks Road in East Hampton. While the Grucci fireworks will be the main attraction, there will also be food, music and dancing on the lawn. This night promises to be great fun for families, or a wonderful idea for a romantic date. And best of all, the evening is a benefit for five different charities, including Fundación Amistad, CMEE, Project MOST, Soldier Ride, and the James Grucci Memorial Fund.

Fundación Amistad is a non-profit organization founded by Luly Duke in 1997. It aims to promote mutual understanding and respect between the people of the United States and Cuba. Fundación Amistad is part of a wide collaborative network of cultural and humanitarian institutions based in Cuba and the United States. To aid in their efforts they have received special licenses from the U.S. government, authorizing travel to Cuba. One of the continuing projects that Fundación Amistad has created is called the "Bridges to Culture" initiative, which sponsors a broad range of cultural programs to bridge the gap between the people of the United States and Cuba. It is important to consider our world neighbors and encourage good relations with all other countries so this is an excellent charity to support, and what a fun way to support it! For more information on Fundación Amistad go to www.fundacionamistad.org.

CMEE, The Children's Museum of the East End, is a non-profit year round children's museum. Located at 376 Bridgehampton/ Sag Harbor Turnpike in Bridgehampton, CMEE features interactive exhibits as well as workshops and programs. The interactive exhibits are both permanent and rotating. The permanent exhibits are a great way for children to explore what makes the East End special and unique. Children and adults alike will enjoy the exhibits on agriculture, fishing, world celebrations, and community. CMEE also encourages guests to explore their outside exhibits, mazes and gardens. Craft classes exploring and engaging many different cultures, traditions are available to children. Go to www.cmee.org to see a complete list of available classes and exhibits.

Soldier Ride is a non-political, non-profit East Hampton based organization that helps soldiers who were severely injured in Afghanistan and Iraq. Each year Soldier Ride sponsors a cross-country cycling event to aid in the rehabilitation of the brave men and women who return home with injuries from current military conflicts abroad. The soldiers who participate say they develop a positive outlook on life and that the community and support that this organization provides helps to speed the process of recovery and rehabilitation. The organization also helps to remind soldiers that the people of our country support them and are grateful to them. With the number of wounded during this present conflict at 18,000 and growing, the need for our continued support is as strong as ever. Check out www.soldierride.org for more information on this interesting and important organization.

The event will also benefit The James Grucci Memorial Fund which aims to give underprivileged children an opportunity to enjoy the American dream and also Project MOST which provides children with academic support and positive after school programs. These programs stress the importance of cultural enrichment, academics, physical exercise, and social development. See www.EHUFSD.org to learn more.

You can buy tickets through the Stephen Talkhouse on the phone by calling 631-267-3117 or online at www.stephentalkhouse.com or though Fundación Amistad by calling 646-732-1416 or by e-mailing dina@fundacionamistad.org. Tickets can be purchased in person at Long Island Sound, 34 Main Street in East Hampton and at Long Island Sound, 76 Jobs Lane in South Hampton and are $250 for adults, $100 under 30, and $50 under 12.

Come enjoy yourself on the Duke lawn with fireworks, food, music, and dancing. Dress casual and bring a little bug spray and a blanket to sit on. Never before has supporting five great charities been so entertaining!

review: murray schisgal plays at guild hall... by jan silver

Playwrights' Theatre of East Hampton produced staged readings of two Murray Schisgal's one-act plays on July 16 at the John Drew Theater. Schisgal is known for his absurdist comedies – a Samuel Beckett with a New York sense of humor. The curtain raiser, The Pushcart Peddlers, is very much in the traditional Schisgal style. Regret, the recently-reworked second play, is a surprise – an artist's comment on what he/she strives for and the toll it takes on a personal life.

The Pushcart Peddlers is a delicious parody of how to succeed in business. Shimmel (Peter Stadlen), a young immigrant just off the boat from Russia, encounters Cornelius J. Hollingsworth (Lewis J. Stadlen) sitting by a pushcart down near the Manhattan docks. Cornelius is a "veteran" New Yorker, having established himself in business two days earlier when he arrived in America. He tells Shimmel one can even chose and buy a new name. Cornelius starts to teach Shimmel how the game of business is played, and Shimmel turns out to be a quick study.

The third character in the playlet is Maggie (Audrey Lynn Weston), another peddler who captures Shimmel's heart. Veteran theater/television/film actor Lewis J. Stadlen (The Producers, Fiddler on the Roof, The Sunshine Boys, Candide, etc.) directed all with perfect comic timing and funny stage business. It is the first time father Lewis and son Peter acted together, and they were a joy to behold – as was Audrey Lynn Weston. Actress Beryl Bernay read the stage directions and set the scene.

Estelle Parsons

Regret featured Judd Hirsch and Estelle Parsons as two older, established painters working in Manhattan ateliers. The artists may or may not know one another and their scenes take place separately but on a shared stage. They have both come to defining emotional and psychological junctures in their lives.

This play is very much the work of a mature artist reflecting back on his life and questioning whether the sacrifices made for art were worth it. The female artist Marta (Estelle Parsons) never married or had children. She feels she has wasted her life trying to make something beautiful and that maybe – although she has received many professional accolades and awards – her life has been meaningless. She tells her young male model, "All artists are heartbroken…[they] can't put on canvas what is so vivid in their imagination."

The male artist Bromberg (Judd Hirsch), who has had a few marriages and several girlfriends, is a cranky curmudgeon. He harangues his young female model for being late and continues to bait her, finally remarking, "What makes a life worthwhile? The pain of creation?"

Regret was directed here by Jesse Berger, an extremely talented artist who flew in from San Diego's Old Globe Theater for this play. The young actors playing the male and female models, Robert "Fitz" Fitzsimmons and Nina Camp, brilliantly conveyed their feelings through minimal dialogue – for Ms. Camp's part, she is onstage almost the entire play but has no dialogue. Marlene Mancini read the stage directions.

A hallmark of Playwrights' Theatre is when playwright, actors and director return to the stage after the performance for a Q & A with the audience, led by producers Mitzi and Perry Pazer. Regret as originally written was two short plays called The Artist and the Model (1 & 2). It was renamed Le Regard and produced in Paris in 2003.

HIGHLIGHTS

Another entertainment-packed week on the South Fork. Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre presents the world premiere of Diane Shaffer's Viva La Vida! starring Mercedes Ruehl as Frida Kahlo, and then comedian Tom Papa next Monday. The Great American Songbook (i.e., popular music from the last 100 years or so) is celebrated this weekend when East Hampton's Guild Hall hosts the third Hamptons Cabaret Convention on Friday and Saturday, then the "American Musical Theatre Salutes" Broadway composers Lerner & Loewe on Sunday. Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center brings in Tony Award-winning Broadway actor/singer Brian Stokes Mitchell on Saturday and the versatile pop stylist Kenny Loggins on Sunday. The renowned singer/songwriter Judy Collins offers two shows at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday.

Classical music also takes center stage. Music Festival of the Hamptons has its final programs and closing gala. Opera of the Hamptons performs "From Opera to Broadway" at Pindar Vineyards on Saturday. The Shinnecock Nation Cultural Center on 27A in Southampton has a summer festival Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m. featuring Native American art, culture, food and Navajo singer Delphine Tsinaginnie (free admission). Bridgehampton Chamber Music Festival opens next Wednesday with a free program celebrating Bridgehampton's 350th anniversary outdoors at the Historical Society.

Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has a house and garden tour with lunch today (call 631-288-1500 for tickets, $50 & $75) and East Hampton's LVIS puts on its annual family fair Saturday at its headquarters on Main St. There are many interesting speakers this week including Neil Goldstein, executive director of the American Jewish Congress on Saturday discussing "The Crisis at Home and Abroad" in Westhampton Beach, and several international films will be screened at local venues. (See "Films" and "Speakers.")

It's the height of benefit season. This weekend, Bridgehampton Polo opens its competition at 4 p.m., Saturday, with gate receipts ($20 per car) going to South Fork Breast Health Coalition, The Cormoria Center for Spiritual and Human Growth in Sag Harbor has its "Gala on the Bay" reception on Saturday (5-8 p.m., tickets $45-50; call 631-725-4206 or email janinecormaria@aol.com.) The delicious Chefs & Champagne benefit for the James Beard Foundation is at Wolffer Estate Vineyard, Sagaponack, on Sat. honoring master chef Thomas Keller (5-8 p.m., $175 members, $250 guests, 212-627-2308).

Five local nonprofits will share the proceeds from the Grucci fireworks, barbecue and music party at the Duke family's Three Mile Harbor home starting at 7 p.m. Saturday (tickets $50-250; call the Talkhouse at 631-267-3117). Child Development Center of the Hamptons holds its Orchid Ball dinner dance on Sat. with auction and entertainment (for tickets, call 631-267-2734 or online at www.cdch.org). Longhouse Reserve, a magnificent arts & crafts foundation in East Hampton, has its annual gala Sat. eve hosted by Edward Albee and founder Jack Lenor Larsen (honoring artists Christo and Jean-Claude, chef Alice Waters and designer Christine Kim, tickets $375, call 631-329-3568).

THEATER and COMEDY

Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, presents the world premiere of Diane Shaffer's play Viva La Vida! starring Mercedes Ruehl. It covers the last months of Mexican artist Frida Kahlo's tumultuous life. Performances are Tues. to Sun. evenings with matinees Wed. & Sat. through Aug.6. Tickets ($45-60) are available online at www.baystreet.org or at the box office after 11 a.m. (631-725-9500).

At Bay Street on Sunday, 2 p.m., Anthony Harvey directs Zoe Caldwell, Marian Seldes, Noah Bean, and Kathy McCafferty in Ellen Violett's new play Dorothy Parker Gets the Last Word (tickets $10 at the door). On Monday at 8 p.m., popular television comedian Tom Papa takes the stage in Bay Street's Comedy Club series (8 p.m., $48).

MUSIC

The Cabaret Convention returns to Guild Hall, East Hampton, for a third year with Friday night performances by Anna Bergman, Klea Blackhurst, Barbara Carroll, Eric Comstock, and more. Saturday performers include Tom Michael, Sidney Myer, Phillip Officer, and many others. Tickets are $40-100 at the box office (631-324-4050). Acclaimed poet Vince Clemente will read from his work at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, tonight at 6 p.m. and food writer Nina Planck speaks Sat., 6 p.m., at Canio's. Best-selling author Melissa Banks reads from her latest novel The Wonder Spot on Sat., 8 p.m., at BookHampton, East Hampton. Stanford University professor Bryan Wolf talks about the Corcoran Gallery of Art's "strange" American collection on Sat., 6 p.m., at the Parrish Art Museum ($10 members, $20 guests). Also on Saturday, following 7 p.m. services, Neil Goldstein of the American Jewish Committee will talk about "The Crisis at Home and Abroad" at The Hamptons Synagogue, Westhampton Beach.

Schisgal, who came onstage after the performance, would very much like it to have a New York production. There were many intelligent questions for him about Regret and what he is trying to say as an artist. He replied:

"I don't think we [as artists] can ever fulfill the hunger we have for perfection – although, in failure and dissatisfaction, great art has been achieved."

Actress Anne Jackson, a longtime Schisgal interpreter (Luv, The Typist and the Tiger, etc.), stood up at the conclusion of the evening and remarked that Regret was one of the most emotionally baring plays she has ever read and commended the playwright and actors for their bravery in performing it.

Guild Hall continues its 75th anniversary season of staged readings the weekend of July 28-30 with three WordTheatre offerings: Gonzo: The Life and Times of Dr. Hunter S. Thompson (Fri.); "30 Years of Pushcart Prize-Winning Stories" read by Dana Delany, Anson Mount, Bob Balaban, Julianne Margulies, Andrew McCarthy, Samantha Mathis, Elizabeth Perkins and others (Sat.); and Kay Eldredge's play The Rambler performed by John Heard. A full production of Robert Wilson's acclaimed Persephone, with music by Philip Glass and Rossini, goes on August 12 & 13, Mercedes Ruehl makes her directorial debut with a staged reading on August 18, and Playwrights' Theatre returns on September 3 with a new play called Russian Romance. Tickets to all Guild Hall performances are sold online at www.guildhall.org or at the box office (631)324-4050.

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood In The Hamptons

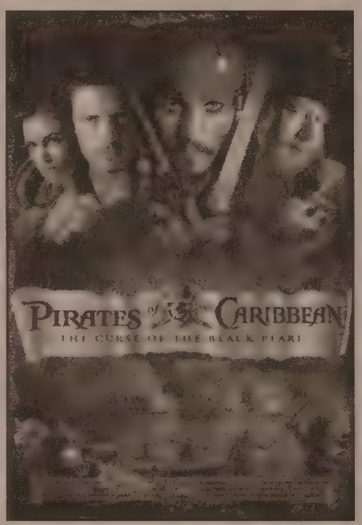
Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest & The Lost City

Would you believe that Johnny Depp didn't blink a squinted eye when asked, "What kind of socks does a pirate wear?" He simply twisted his pouty mouth and snarled, "Arr-gyles" Arr-r! That's just too much. Who'd-a-thunk when, in 2003, Mr. Depp accepted a campy Disney role as a pirate, stepping right out of the Village People, that he'd enjoy himself and gain so much success (including an Oscar nomination). No surprise, he's back for volume two of Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest. When is too much of a good thing too much? This is!

And, here's another over-drawn movie that is too, too. This is Andy Garcia's The Lost City. Who'd-a-thunk that finally, after 16 years, he'd be able to co-produce, direct, compose music for, and star in his politically driven fodder for the expatriate, Florida-Cuban Americans. It is lavishly generated with ripe-as-a-ten-day-old-banana visual and melodic sense-stimulating cha-cha-cha-ing mambos, rumbas and the splashed green of Havana in the late 50s.

Woefully, Mr. Garcia presents his anti-Castro views simplistically. His attack on the revolution totally blind-sides the oppression and dire poverty that brought about the uprising against the despotic Batista. Garcia's Lost City is only lost to the "Haves" who ran. Wonderful and disingenuously amateurish, Lost City is also too, too. It's too long. At 2 hours 23 minutes, it's outdistanced in backside numbing weariness by Pirates, which runs 2 minutes longer, but at a faster pace. Both contain too much very entertaining stuff and too much trite and obvious stuff and both weigh in too heavily with grinding pushiness. Now then, of these two bottom-heavy, strutting-on-clay-footed-premises movies, to which do I give the tired nod of critical choice? Hands down and politics tucked away in a rough burlap bag of prejudice, I choose Andy's Lost City to put my bottom half to sleep rather than Johnny's Pirates to render my top half senselessly numb.

No doubt one of the beautiful aspects of Garcia's film is his apparent fierce love of his subjects: the gorgeous Latinos and their cultural bounty. This flips you over the stilted platitudes into a heady romanticism reminiscent of films like Doctor Zhivago and Casablanca. The Lost City swims in the persistence of love and loyalty in the midst of political strife. The ambitious screenplay is by C. Cabrera Infante adapted from his novel, Tres Tristes Tigres. The Three Sad Tigers refer to Fico Fellove, portrayed by Mr. Garcia, and two brothers. He is the owner of the nightclub, El Tropico, patterned after Havana's famed Tropicana and his character is like Rick in Casablanca who won't be "involved," but his two brothers are revolutionaries. They are Ricardo, played by Enrique Murciano, and Luis, by Nestor Carbonell. They are swept up by Castro's armies as they approach the city. The political dissention in the family isn't explored nearly as convincingly as the physical eloquence and decaying voluptuousness of the small upper class of pre-Castro Cuba.



Garcia admits he did not have much time in Cuba so the film has been Mr. Infante's story of the family saga. As sagas go, especially with first time directors, the influence of one's own experiences prevails. The Godfather II movie enters the mix with Meyer Lansky's role barely filled by Dustin Hoffman. Andy's Fico has a writer friend, a world-weary writer with Bill Murray doing his rather worn-out characterization of the worn cynic. An excellent performance by Jsu Garcia as "Che" Guevara puts the Castro ideologue in perspective and long on your memory will be Ines Sastre bearing all the elegance Mr. Garcia does so well.

Arg-h-h! What else can one say about Dead Man's Chest? For it continues to resemble too closely the theme park "thrills and chills" ride it sprang from. It propels you, impels you, tries to dispel you and after the first hour, if you are not locked in its spell, you could doze except for the noisy racket as swashbucklers' swash and truly disgusting looking, man-sea creature pirates disturb your children. (They look like Wainscott's The Seafood Shoppe's gut bucket.) Yet, there are the good lookers! Depp, Orlando Bloom and Keira Knightley have really nice faces. The story?? Arr-ghh! A friend of mine said she thought the first Pirates was awful, confusing and a mess. She's changed her mind. It was great when compared to this second episode. Can you possibly wait for the third? It's coming!

Arr-gh-h!

Dave Evans'

MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Clerks II

After trawling movie wilderness with a string of high-profile failures from Dogma to the Bennifer-Mark-I disaster that was Jersey Girl, Kevin Smith finally comes back to what he knows with a sequel to his breakout film, Clerks. It's business as usual for the hyperactive minds of convenience and video store clerks, Dante and Randal, and while this may not be revolutionary cinema, it's a comforting and funny return to form.

Lady in the Water

M. Night Shyamalan has an absurd amount riding on this. Having started so strongly with The Sixth Sense, his follow-ups have been lackluster affairs, losing fans left, right and center. Having turned the blame for that run of dross on Disney, this is his chance to show what he can do when unfettered. Bryce Dallas Howard stars as a woman caught between the fairy-tale world and reality.

Monster House

There are genres that are entirely review-proof and I suspect that the slick celebrity-voiced-CGI-ensemble is one of them. That's not to say that this is bad or that Steve Buscemi, Kathleen Turner and Maggie Gyllenhaal don't perform well, simply that this is only what you expect of it. The plot concerns three teenagers who find out that a neighborhood house is a living, breathing monster.

My Super Ex-Girlfriend

When good people do bad things. A delightful cast of Uma Thurman, Luke Wilson and Anna Farris (the under-rated lead of the Scary Movie series) work their hardest to make this story of a jilted super-heroine fly, but there's nothing to do. Director Ivan Reitman, formerly of Ghostbusters I and II, has firmly misplaced his touch for this kind of caper.

The Oh in Ohio

Paul Rudd and Parker Posey star as a couple whose supposedly perfect life is somewhat lacking in the bedroom. As they search for sexual fulfillment, they are aided by a supporting cast headed by the excellent Danny De Vito alongside a suitably ludicrous Liza Minnelli and Mischa Barton on unexpectedly strong form. Slight but refreshingly pleasant.

Gabrielle

In a season awash with blockbuster schlock, it's a relief to sit down in the movie theater for something with some meat on it. Here, the extraordinary Isabelle Huppert is in fine form in this dark family drama about a letter which unravels a relationship. Director Patrice Chereau admirably upholds the slick, sinister style of 2001's Intimacy to create an intelligent and unsettling masterpiece.

Little Man

The unstoppably large Wayans clan returns with this tasteless comedy about a couple that mistake a thieving dwarf for their child. So far so Don't Look Now, but there's none of the horror of that film in store here. Instead the story plods on as, alongside a number of trashy sight gags and gross-out treats, the power of love overcomes the "little man's" criminality.

You, Me and Dupree

Following on from the success of Wedding Crashers, Owen Wilson stays in that milieu, starring here as a best man who refuses to leave the lives of newlyweds Matt Dillon and Kate Hudson once the "I Dos" have been exchanged. Michael Douglas is wheeled out for a supporting role but nothing can spark any excitement in this tired, lazy project.

A Scanner Darkly

Richard Linklater has largely made his name as a director of adolescent existential musings, so it's strange to see him working on high-concept sci-fi with this adaptation of Philip K. Dick's novel. Keanu Reeves stars as a police agent with a split personality, chasing his own tail in an urban dystopia. Pretentious and preposterous in places, this is just about slick enough to pull it off.

Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Man's Chest

The film based on the theme park ride returns, this time with mercifully little emphasis on the insipid 'romance' between Keira Knightley and Orlando Bloom and a far larger part for Johnny Depp's spectacular Captain Jack Sparrow. Bill Nighy of Love, Actually fame proves a worthily camp opponent as the half-fish, half-man Davy Jones.

Edmond

William H. Macy plays the enigmatic title character in this dark and surreal urban drama. Lured on by a fortune-teller, Macy finds himself lurching into increasingly frenzied psychological states. With a script by David Mamet, things are terse and sinister, but while Macy is excellent at falling apart on camera, he is let down by a weak supporting cast and some uninspired direction from horror maestro Stuart Gordon.

Superman Returns

In an age of bloated franchises flogged well past the dead-horse stage (Cheaper by the Dozen 2? Garfield 2?) it's hard to get excited about the big summer blockbusters any more. It comes as a lovely surprise, with Bryan Singer's resuscitation of the man in the red cape, to find yourself ogling the screen in a kind of childish wonder. This looks lovely and will sweep you away – just don't think too hard.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Tom Friedman of the New York Times is wrong. Let me explain. Tom is probably one of the smartest guys in the world who writes for the best newspaper in the world. He's certainly an expert on Middle Eastern affairs, but when it comes to automobile advice, he just ain't up to speed. Recently,Tom made some comments that there should be a one dollar a gallon gasoline tax added to the current high price of gasoline. Why? To wean Americans from buying and driving gas hogs.

This idea has merit, but why should the poor American public pay further up the nose for a problem that has been created by the car companies and the government? It's the old Eisenhower "military-industrial complex" thing that he told us to be wary of. For decades, Detroit has been hawking larger cars on the American public because of product delineation and, of course, profit. In general, Americans have been brainwashed to believe that bigger is better, in many cases more prestigious. That's why, today, cars are classified as compact, mid-size, or full size. The compact models are always the least expensive with the least features. By the way, the reason car makers prefer to build larger cars is because there is considerably more profit in a big vehicle. You see, it doesn't take that much more money to build larger body panels. The engines and sub-systems are usually the same in large and small cars.

There is nothing wrong with this marketing, except for the fact that Detroit, in its greed for profit, has failed to take the American public's well being into consideration and has offered them vehicles that have not gotten better, but worse fuel mileage over the years. So here we are, caught in a national mess, with large car sales in the dumps and American auto manufacturers crying all the way to the bank, with no deposits. Why should the American public be forced to pay an extra dollar per gallon for this turmOIL?

Of course the government is also at fault. This current do-nothing Congress actually did something with regard to fuel economy. They rescinded the strict standards that were mandated by the previous administration. As astounding as it sounds, with the world in a mess and dependent on a fuel source from an area with a short fuse, this government actually made us more dependent on belligerent foreigners.

So, what can be done to get us out of this quagmire and save Detroit at the same time? First of all, the government should immediately (and not in a ten year period as they have stated) impose effective higher fuel standards on all cars. Make it a three-year time frame. Perhaps put a yearly federal tax on every car sold over two liters in size. This is currently done in some European countries and works quite well. Even Ferrari produced a three liter and a two-liter engined car of the same model, their best selling ever, 308GT. It's obvious that the larger the engine, the more fuel it burns. I feel that a well engineered small engined family sedan can be quite fast, but frugal. Most of all, our policymakers have to stop letting big business lobbyists give them policy direction. What's "Good for General Motors" is not good for the United States.

Smaller car production would be a hard crossover for Detroit, but the not so big secret is that every single American car manufacturer here builds some really excellent high fuel mileage vehicles that are sold by the thousands in other countries. For several years Ford has been selling a cute, strongly built and extremely fun to drive car in Europe called the KA. Pronounced like Ted Kennedy would say "car." These cute little buggers that run about $10,000 and get about 45 mpg, are all over Europe. There is also a sensational, newly-designed Ford Focus economy car that can even be ordered with a diesel. Ford, for some odd reason, does not want to replace the current American Focus with this model. I guess they would still rather sell their 13 mpg SUVs. Did you know that recently a Ford Focus won the prestigious Monte Carlo Rallye, Ford kept that a secret here, too. Hmmm. Also General Motors and Chrysler are selling cars all over the world with small engines, many with diesel applications. One good sign, next year Chrysler is putting an excellent Mercedes diesel in its Grand Cherokee for the American market.

American buying habits have to change. We have to understand that bigger is not always better. I'm not saying everyone should be driving mini cars, but the size and weight of some of the production SUVs and sedans is simply ridiculous. There is something we can do about high gas prices. That is to demand more fuel efficient vehicles from Detroit and from the government. Vote with your check book and purchase smaller, more fuel efficient vehicles. They are also more fun to drive.

DAN'S TRAVELS

book review: the wonder spot by melissa bank

There is just something about Melissa Bank's voice. I originally noticed it when I heard her read from The Girls' Guide to Hunting and Fishing, her first novel, at Hobart and William Smith College several years ago. Then, last summer,- at the Southampton Writers Conference, she read an essay about overcoming cancer only to be hit by a taxicab. I realized that not only was it her voice, but the intonation, her wit and ability to balance humor with tragedy, not to mention the slightly mischievous grins she occasionally gives her audience. When I was offered the chance to review The Wonder Spot, Melissa's second book, I did what any other lazy/busy American would have done, I flipped to the back, saw the last page number was 324 and went to iTunes to downloaded it. Sophie Applebaum, the main character of the book, would have appreciated the attempt at making my homework easier.

Greeted by Melissa's familiar voice, I slipped into the world of Sophie Applebaum as she progresses from a pre-bat mitzvah teen through life, not exactly as an outsider, but always walking lightly on the fringe, searching for her place. The novel, told in short stories, stands as eight individual pieces of fiction. Independent of the previous chapters, the snapshots read with an echo of Raymond Carver. The tales aren't as depressing or characters down and out, but something, maybe the attention to the miniscule details –"Wranglers cuffed over Keds" – carries the weight of a time and place.

Bank's ability to capture an era, an adolescent emotion, or universal feeling with the intimacy she does in this book is spot on. "Dena Blumenthal + Bobby Orr Forrever" paints, with pinpoint accuracy, the plight of Sophie's inadequacy at the ice skating rink. From her lack of the proper skates to the resignation of cozying up to a cup of hot chocolate instead of risking losing face on the rink, Bank creates the suburban nightmare that is the teenage skating scene. In moments like this, we see Sophie as a tag-along, a third wheel – not unaccepted, but clearly not the center of attention. This would all be incredibly sad, but Bank pulls us out of our sympathetic awww, with the hand of the "striking" Dena Blumenthal, who offers friendship and encouragement. Twenty years later, the two finally realize they have grown out of each other. These moments of disparagement and renewal appear somewhat often in the book, but each chapter doesn't necessarily finish on a high note.

I may be painting the wrong picture; the novel isn't simply about the lows of Sophie's life. For as much heartache, there is an equal amount of humor and poignant moments. The wit is fantastic. The rapid quips between Sophie and her brothers elevate this book from being lost in the pack of works dealing with women growing into themselves. Her battle with her brother's live-in Orthodox girlfriend has great moments of humor. But in the midst of sneaking cereal in the meat bowls, we are exposed to Sophie's realization that her brother has fallen in love with a person she will never understand and that the bond between Sophie and her little brother has been superseded by another woman.

Among friends and family, Sophie isn't afraid to call it as she sees it, but her sureness is generally suppressed in her relationships with men. Always aware that she isn't the brightest or best looking in the room, she seems to rest on her humor as a means of keeping people at a slight distance. And when she does open herself up, it almost never works out in her favor.

Sophie sees everything, and has the incredible ability to digest the words and actions of others. The slightest look, an exhalation, a squeezed hand – she finds the immense gravity in the most subtle of gestures, like the offering of a coat from her decade younger boyfriend when she says she is "cold."

As I said, the stories stand by themselves, but to read them out of order, or to read only a few of the stories is a disservice to the book. Bank, like Sophie, has an eye for subtlety. Throughout, she threads allusions to previous chapters. In "Teen Romance" she writes, "I mean, what kind of thirty-seven-year-old calls himself Bobby?' One said, 'Hockey player?'" – a nod to "Dena Blumenthal + Bobby Orr Forrever." Characters like Francine Lawlor and Pete from Martha's Vineyard reappear, as markers of time, adding insight into the people who stay in Sophie's life and those who do not.

The wry humor and brilliant observations create a unique piece of literature, not fluffy chick lit., but proper writing, with the skills and talent inherent in only a few young writers of today. Bank presents eight polished pieces. When combined, they form the evolution of an awkward girl to a woman at peace with herself.

Melissa Bank will be reading at BookHampton, in East Hampton, on Saturday, July 22, at 8 p.m. The Wonder Spot is available in bookstores nationwide.

TAKE A HIKE WITH KEN KINDLER

Classic Water Loop

Last Saturday, my wife and sister both had a free day and I talked them into joining me on a short hike to the water. They are always ready for a day at the beach. My wife agreed, but knowing me, asked skeptically "How far will we have to walk?" I sidestepped this question by explaining that it was in Hither Woods and we would be visiting Napeague Bay. "Sounds beautiful," my wife responded, "but how far do we have to walk?" "Only four miles," I responded. "Each way? No, I want to relax at the beach!" "An easy two mile walk each way," I cajoled her, and the three of us set off on our adventure.

The Overlook is located on Montauk Highway, about a mile east of where Old Montauk Highway and Montauk Highway split. When we arrived, there were several people unloading ATVs from their pick-up trucks. I looked from them to the signs that stated that it is illegal to drive motor vehicles on the trails, and then watched them drive away; two people on each unlicensed machine. I called 911; they transferred me to the park police, to whom I reported the incident.

We tucked our pants into our socks and sprayed our shoes and socks with DEET then entered the woods by the Serpent's Back Trail sign. This is a little confusing because you are actually walking the Parkway Trail. We headed east a short distance and took the first left to the Serpent's Back Trail; marked with black plastic blazes. It heads north to the Paumanok Path and then a short trail takes you to the beach at Quince Tree Landing. My wife remembered our walk there last summer and alarmed, asked "Are we walking the Serpent's Back Trail?" That beach is very rocky and the hilly trail is tough to walk." I reassured her that we'd only be on this trail for a short distance then turn left onto the Ocean View Trail following it for .6 mile to Old North Road.

The beaach at Napeague

Around this time we became aware that the mosquito population was frighteningly oppressive. I suggested going back to get the insect spray that we had applied to our shoes. (The can reads that it can be applied lightly to the skin, but when I use DEET on my skin it makes me nauseous.) My wife remembered that she had a bottle of Avon Skin So Soft with her. Supposedly, this is an effective mosquito repellent. We frantically covered ourselves with the oily substance and were amazed to find that it was so effective that we could immediately tell what spots we had missed. On the beach, however, the green flies didn't seem bothered by it; ticks also don't seem to notice.

When we arrived at the Old North Road we turned left and then made a quick right onto Fresh Pond Landing Road. The Old North Road is supposed to have green blazes, but I couldn't see them. We crossed over the railroad tracks. Turning either left or right would have taken us to the Paumanok Path. We continued straight ahead on Fresh Pond Landing Road; a wide woods road that takes you to the beach.

The beach was breathtakingly beautiful; even worth being accosted by mosquitoes to get there. The bay was cold and the beach refreshingly cool. We spread out our blanket and took a well-deserved rest, enjoying the peace and quiet as we observed the terns, cormorants, and osprey.

After a time we felt ready to hike back to the Overlook. We walked back up Fresh Pond Landing Road and, deciding to take a different return route, took a right turn onto the PP, heading southwest. At first this route seemed like a better choice; both my sister and wife thought it was prettier and easier to walk (less rocky and hilly). We passed by Fresh Pond and through an area that was almost like a meadow; grassy, with low green growth and many "Indian Pipes" (a plant without chlorophyll that resembles pipes). Soon after, we walked through a trail dense with pine, enjoying the scent and the soft bed of needles on which to walk. Later on though, the trail became quite narrow; we walked through overgrowth that made my sister and wife feel claustrophobic and concerned about acquiring ticks. We continued walking, turned left and crossed the railroad tracks onto Elisha's Valley Trail. We took a quick right onto Old North Road and then a left onto the Petticoat Hill Trail. This trail splits in a few places; several different routes take you back to the Overlook.

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

With the weather so hot and humid, my sister, Paula, and my niece, Christine, took some time out of their busy schedules to visit for the weekend. We did a lot of shopping and a little beaching, in that order. Let's do some summer shopping!

While you are shopping in Southampton, you should stop into the Elegant Setting, on Main Street, for a book signing and sale on Saturday, July 22 from 2 to 5 p.m. Southampton resident Victoria Amory's new cook book, Delicious, will be available while you're shopping.

The Cashmere Outlet on Jobs Lane in Southampton, and Newtown Lane in East Hampton, has introduced their famous Scottish Cashmere "Ultimate Golf Sweater" for ladies and men at mill prices. For a complete selection of cashmeres for babies, ladies and men.....at affordable prices, stop in here.

At Taman Batu & Flying Point Surf & Sport on North Highway in Southampton look for a huge collection of lava stone statuary, exotic imports from Bali, Lombok, Columbia and Brazil, and in the Surf & Sport shop you can stock up on summer fun items such as boogie boards, surfboards, wetsuits, swimsuits, beach chairs and beach accessories.

At all Sleepy's locations throughout the Hamptons, look for a half price sale that is in progress right now on Beautyrest mattresses. This is the time to get those new guestrooms comfy, so that your guests never want to leave.

The Elegant Setting

In the Bridgehampton Commons on Montauk Highway at Lands End at Kmart, you will be happy to know that they have expanded the "Summer Shop." There is more of everything, including beach bags, bathing suits, legendary beach towels, durable personalized totes, and shorts, T-shirts, and polos for men and women. Don't pass up the wonderful selection of fine teak furniture at the Summer Shop, which will only be at this location until right after Labor Day Weekend.

Talbot's, located in the Bridgehampton Commons, is having a summer sale that will fill your needs for day and nighttime dress. There are plenty of great ladies' clothing and accessories to choose from, so you can add to your summer wardrobe collection and save 40% to 60% off selected merchandise with this sale.

GNC in the Bridgheampton Commons is also having a 50% off summer sale on selected health merchandise such as vitamins and more.

Don't pass up Victoria's Secret, also in the Commons, and its 50% off undies sale. This is when I stock up for the entire year.

At Collette, 59 The Circle in East Hampton, there is brand new inventory that has just arrived. Currently there are vintage Prada, Hermes, Chanel, Vuitton and Judith Lieber bags to die for. And perfect for summer wear, there is a large selection of vintage jewelry from the Lynn Stoller Collection, as well as contemporary designs from Luca Bella Jewelry, Beth Starkland and Joanne Astolpho. Don't miss out on the fabulous collection of designer shoes featuring Manolo Blahnik, Miss Tish of Capri and so much more. My niece practically bought out the store.....There is more arriving, so don't worry.

The East Hampton Pharmacy is not just a pharmacy.....You will find a huge selection of greeting cards, gifts, and products that include Apiana Soaps, Hubner Oils, Penny Candy, Burt's Bees, Phyto Hair Care, Hampton Popcorn, Illume candles, Ergo candles, Tweezerman, Kiss My Face, Anthony, Jack Black and so much more.

If you have been waiting for the summer sale at The Latham House, on Main Street in Sag Harbor, it's here! This is when my good friend Blaise and I hit this fabulous men's shop for great savings on men's and ladies' fine clothing, sportswear, shoes and accessories. We love this sale!

On The North Fork: California Sunshine Swimwear Super Store, at Tanger II in Riverhead, is having a summer sale on most beach cover-ups where you buy one, get one at 50% off. There are also additional savings on selected merchandise, buy one, get one at 20% off and 40% off. Now is the time to stock up on all your summer and year 'round swim and cruise wear at discount prices. Believe it or not, you can choose from over 10,000 swimsuits, matching cover-ups and accessories and mix and match separates in sizes extra small to 40E. There is a huge selection that include designer, contemporary, juniors, pre-teens, and plus sizes For you men, there is plenty to choose from here too.

After a pretty full day of shopping, we changed our hats and went to the beach to cool off.....

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you have any questions or comments, or your shop is having a sale, and you would like everyone to know about it, I would love to hear from you via e-mail at: shoptil@danspapers.com or you can reach me by fax at: 631-537-6755.

Dan's Fashion

Strapped For Class

I opened up a magazine and saw pictures of all sorts of celebrities sporting them. I walked into the mall and found them on display in all the stores. I even Googled them to see what was going on, and found over 40,000 results. It would appear that Grecian tie sandals are a full-blown trend.

It's true that fashion repeats itself, and this is the case more than ever lately. Along with leggings, Grecian tie sandals have come back with a vengeance, although it has taken more than just a decade to rebound. The Grecian tie sandal, as the title suggests, dates back to the earliest civilizations, when it consisted of little more than a strap to protect the foot. The Greeks originally fashioned their sandals with wooden or leather soles, and attached them to the foot with a leather thong. The sandal straps were usually arranged with a broad band across the front of the foot, and a thong between the toes. The thong was then pulled to meet with four other laces anchored to the sole. The complete intertwined system tied above the ankle. The straps were very lightweight and elegant, leaving the foot almost bare. Herein lies the appeal of the Grecian sandal, I think – the allure of a weightless shoe, like the flip-flop, but classier, like the flat.

These shoes, which were worn in the natural leather color or dyed black or red, eventually became more than just protection. They became a distinguishing mark, illustrating social class, or perhaps the lack of, with varying colors representing different classes. And of course, it was only a matter of time before the sandals turned into a fashion statement.

Speaking of fashion statements, let's talk about shopping. As I mentioned, there is no shortage of Grecian sandals on the market, and there are plenty of options, whether you want to keep it casual or dress up in full gladiator regalia. BCBGirls has some beautiful pairs, though I must mention that these are not for the faint of heart, but instead call out to the true fashionista. The Limple shoe has a complicated look, but appearances can be deceiving. The ribbed straps cross the top of the foot and finish in a dual adjustable ankle strap, making the shoe a slip-on, but keeping its look very authentic. The shoe is available in tobacco leather, black leather and platino leather at zappos.com. If you have a few more minutes in the morning and can spare the time to actually lace up your sandals, then the Lucky shoe is a perfect choice. This pair, also by BCBGirls, has the signature flat sole with intertwining lacing across the foot. But the real attraction is the thin leather straps that you tie up your leg. The Lucky shoe can be found in black and chocolate at onlineshoes.com.

But the shoes you really need are the brown suede Cat's Cradle sandals made by Lolli by Reincarnation. At $175 a pair, these are a splurge – but it's worth it. The sandal can be worn in a dozen different ways, ranging from a simple flip-flop style tied at the ankle to a lace-up version worthy of Russell Crowe. With this sandal, you can crisscross the laces as much, or as little, as your heart desires – or as your clock allows.

Upon further inspection, I realized that Grecian tie sandals are not the only lace-up sandals dominating the shelves. Espadrilles, the Spanish import, have also become quite popular these days. Truthfully, these are a little less cutting edge, and thus, are easier to wear, providing a nice alternative to the decidedly fashion-forward Grecian sandal. Espadrille is a French word deriving from the Spanish word esparto, the tough North African grass originally used to make rope. Though there are many different styles of espadrilles, the defining characteristic is the rope sole that gives the shoe its name. Catalonia is the home to the espadrille, and people of the area have been making them since the 1600s. I could go on for pages listing the great pairs of espadrilles available, but I'll just direct you to espadrillesetc.com, an authentic site that guarantees a successful shopping excursion. Look for the lace-up versions, your best bet this season.

The next time someone tells you to lace up your shoes, don't be caught with a pair of sneakers. Get yourself a pair of Grecian-inspired sandals or Catalonian-influenced espadrilles as soon as possible. Wasn't it about time you booked that vacation anyway?

EAST END KID:
EM VISITS THE WATERMILL CENTER

BY EMILY HART POST

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post.

There was a kid's event at the Watermill Center on Sunday, but I had the chance to go to the Grand Opening Gala, at least for the cocktails. No, before you report my Dad, I did not have any cocktails, but I did see the interesting and strange performances put together by the great Robert Wilson. My favorite was "Emily Likes the TV," of course because of the name, and that Emily was covered with cigarettes and even I know that is bad for you. I walked around and had my picture taken with some celebrities, including Donna Karan (I jumped into the pictures being taken of her by fashion magazines). I saw Annie Leibovitz, who I am told is a very famous photographer, and her daughter sitting on the grass. I ran over and sat with them and had my picture taken, no, not by Annie. The Watermill Center party seemed to have lots of smiling faces, so I guess it was a happy occasion. Although Lou Reed brought his dog, there were lots of other kids there, so it seems that the kids are taking over all the parties. I'm in favor of that! Another fun thing that happened is that a family came over to me to tell me how much they enjoyed this column – thanks!

book review: duckhampton by christian mclean

While reading Duckhampton, I was reminded of those few books from my childhood that never left me. I believe this tale might be one of these unforgettables, a book that children will enthusiastically drag to bed every night and memorize before they learn to read. The story follows the Gadwalls, a family of noble ducks from Central Park, as they journey to Duckhampton. Paired with the illustrations by Amelia Haviland, Christian McLean's book is bound to amuse, and like most noteworthy children's books, might even teach us a thing or two.

Duckhampton is a place where the ponds are always perfect and there are no geese or pigeons to menace happy ducklings. While children will delight in the cast of quackers and the rich images, adults will find a humorous parallel to our local land in a world of "Vanderbills" and "Rockefeathers," elegant swans, clear water and happy white ducks with up-turned bills.While we surely have encountered copious Hamptons-inspired tales, we have never seen anything quite like this.

The adventure begins when the Gadwall family decides to leave their posh pond residence in Central Park for the idyllic waters of Duckhampton and the smallest of the five ducklings, Robert, falls behind.

Young Robert, like all Gadwalls, is a socially savvy duck who knows the rules of the "Central Park pecking order." He believes what his father says to be true: "All birds are different and must be treated so." Gadwalls have no business fraternizing with pigeons or geese.

This world view is challenged when the pigeons and geese he encounters become Robert's hope for finding his family. Even the admirable swans dismiss him on account of ruffled feathers and dubious company. With his new companions offering direction and some moral support, Robert makes his way due east, through Queens, Manquackset, East Egg, Ronquackama, past the giant white duck that nestles Route 24 in Flanders, and even makes a stop at Duckampton Jail.

Although only recently published, McLean's children's book piqued local interest almost immediately. Perhaps you have already noticed Duckhampton displayed in bookstore windows in East Hampton. The reason? Because no one has ever thought to tell this story before. Because it is sensitive and droll; because every child adores ducks and every parent hopes for a book that will teach kindness.

Besides the witty allusions to our local land, this book captures something of the magic out here. To see why, take a glance at the lavender-lit party scene, full of chuckling ducks in top hats and glowing lanterns. Turn the pages. There are ducks spiraling down waterslides, bugs playing volleyball, swans in straw hats and frogs floating in hot-air balloons. Like the best in the children's book genre, the amusing tale of the Gadwalls has the power to say something while it entertains. It teaches tolerance. The moral is straightforward but universal. Love thy neighbor, whether pigeon, goose or duck.

The drawings by Haviland are a huge part of why this review is so effusive. They are intricate and inspired, adorned with delicate shadows and animate characters. At closer look, any scene gains depth, revealing layers of designs and miniature worlds, from an owl with a yo-yo to tiny ants sliding down raindrops or grasshoppers playing the triangle. Among the striking images are bustling cityscapes with spiraling fire escapes and one remarkable dream scene. Like the story, the details are rendered with a playful eye.

The storyline may be simple, but only someone with acute sensitivity to our world might have dreamed this one up. The writing is strong, the illustrations are dazzling, the dialogue is sharp. In its entirety, this book is nothing short of enchanting.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

At a couple of recent dinners we had the joy of attending, the ideal opener of those summer meals was a cold soup. With so many summer vegetables hitting the peak of freshness, it's just a matter of cooking your vegetables, adding broth and seasonings, then blending the soup to a smooth puree.

A sophisticated English pea soup with bits of lobster floating about and garnished with a dollop of créme fraiche and caviar was served chilled at a rather large formal sit-down dinner. At a smaller dinner party, my hostess prepared a delicious zucchini soup, pureed with green pepper and onion and garnished with dill. The cooling soups with their velvety texture were smooth and comforting. With the bonus of make-ahead recipes that make them "easy," I have adapted both soups for the summer kitchen. Serve the soups with crispy Parmesan crisps – they make a delectable accompaniment.

Any time a dish is refrigerated, whether a soup, salad, or a dish to be reheated, remember that cold tends to mute flavors. The allure of cold soups requires that seasonings be intensified, so be sure to taste before serving and adjust as necessary.

CHILLED SUMMER SQUASH BELL PEPPER SOUP

For maximum flavor, purchase farm fresh small or narrow, local summer squash and sweet bell peppers

Yield: 2 quarts

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
3-4 narrow summer squash, scrubbed and sliced
1 bunch scallions, rinsed, trimmed and sliced
2 red bell peppers, rinsed, seeded and diced
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
5 cups chicken stock, preferably homemade or canned, low-sodium
1/2 cup sour cream or crème fraiche
Parsley leaves or dill sprigs for garnish

1. Heat the oil in a large saucepan over medium heat and put in the vegetables. Stir to coat in the oil and season with salt and pepper. Tear a square of wax paper to fit snugly over the vegetables, cover the pan, reduce heat to a simmer and "sweat" the vegetables about 7 minutes. Uncover pan, remove and discard wax paper and pour the broth over the vegetables. Cook, with cover ajar, for 25-30 minutes until the vegetables are tender. Taste for seasonings and adjust as necessary.

2. Puree the soup in a blender or hand-held immersion blender until creamy. Taste for seasonings and adjust as necessary. Homemade stock is generally unsalted – at least mine is – and so you will need to add salt to your taste. If using canned low-sodium broth, taste and salt judiciously, as necessary. Add the sour cream or créme fraiche and stir to mix. Prepare the soup up to one day ahead for flavors to develop. Garnish with parsley leaves or dill sprigs.

PUREE OF CHILLED PEA SOUP WITH SCALLOP GARNISH

An inspired soup to serve chilled in the heat of the summer.

Serves 6-8

2 cups farm fresh shelled peas or frozen petit pois
2 cups watercress leaves
3-4 scallions, trimmed and thinly sliced
3 tablespoons sugar
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
4-5 cups water
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
1/2 cup heavy cream

For the garnish
3-4 scallops, sautéed or poached
Créme fraiche
Mint leaves

1. Put the peas in a saucepan with watercress, scallions, sugar, salt, pepper and water. Bring to a boil with cover ajar, then reduce heat to a brisk simmer until peas are tender, about 8-10 minutes.

2. Puree the soup in a food mill or with an immersion blender directly in the saucepan. Add the butter to melt in the soup while still warm, then add the cream and stir to mix. Taste to adjust seasonings as necessary. Transfer to a suitable container and refrigerate for several hours or overnight.

3. To serve, prepare the scallops and cut them into tiny dice. Divide soup for serving, then place a dollop of créme fraiche in center of each soup bowl. Top with a bit of scallop and garnish with a mint leaf.

PARMESAN CRISPS

The key is to use quality aged Reggiano Parmigiano for grating. The name is stamped on the rind.

Makes about one dozen crisps

1/2 pound finely grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

1. For easy grating, cut a wedge of Parmesan cheese into small chunks and process in your food processor for several seconds until finely grated. Or grate on a small hand grater.

2. Spoon 2 teaspoons cheese in small heaps on the baking sheet, flattening them a bit with the back of a spoon and placing them about 1 inch apart. Bake in preheated oven for about 8 minutes until golden. The crisps will be a little soft at first but will harden while cooling on the paper. If preparing ahead, transfer the rounds, with a small metal spatula, to an airtight container for up to a day or two.

Dining in the Hamptons

Chefs and Champagne At Wolffer Estate

By Silvia Lehrer

The celebrated chef Thomas Keller, of the French Laundry in Napa Valley and Per Se in New York City, will be the honored guest at Chefs and Champagne 2006 at a lavish tasting party to benefit the James Beard Foundation on Saturday, July 22, from 5 to 8 p.m. on the beautiful grounds of Wolffer Estate in Sagaponack. Some of the best chefs from around the country, including Doug Gulija, Plaza Café, Southampton, Christian Mir, Stone Creek Inn, East Quogue and David Cruces of Annona, Westhampton, will join Mr. Keller to serve their culinary specialties along with pourings of Champagne Charles Heidsieck and wines from Wolffer Estate Vineyards, title sponsors of the event. To add to the excitement on July 22, several magnificent Rolls-Royces, courtesy of Manhattan Motorcars of the Hamptons, will be featured for guests to explore.

The James Beard Foundation, which has a long tradition of supporting culinary education, is excited about the development of the "Chefs and Champagne: Christian Wolffer Scholarships," which will support three students in their studies of food and wine. For the first time, the recipients of the scholarships will be announced at the event! Proceeds for Chefs and Champagne include maintaining the historic James Beard House in Greenwich Village, New York, which serves as a performance space for chefs across the country and to administer scholarships for culinary studies.

The Chefs of Chefs and Champagne

James Beard, cook book author and teacher with an encyclopedic knowledge of food, who died in 1985, was a champion of American cuisine. He helped educate, nurture and mentor generations of professional chefs and food enthusiasts.

Chefs and Champagne is open to the public – tickets are $175 for James Beard Foundation members and $250 for other guests. For reservations and information, call 212 -675 4984.

LOCAL CHEFS AT CHEFS AND CHAMPAGNE

Thomas Keller, one of Americas most respected chefs with his contribution to the culinary field, is a perfect example of the culinary heritage that the James Beard Foundation celebrates. Here are brief profiles of three of our very own East End chefs who would have made Mr. Beard proud.

Doug Gulija, executive chef/owner of Plaza Café in Southampton, received a review of "excellent" by the New York Times, when he opened the restaurant in the winter of 1997. A Southampton native, Doug entered the culinary program at Johnson and Wales after completing college, moved onward to learn his craft and to explore broader culinary horizons. Doug was recently selected from a pool of chefs across the state to represent New York State on August 6th at the 3rd Annual Great American Seafood Cook-Off at the Earnest N. Morial Convention Center in New Orleans. Doug will prepare a sumptuous tuna tartar, crab ceviche tian – layers of Asian inspired tuna tartar with ginger, rice wine and Yuzu (citron vinaigrette) on a bed of avocado salad and topped with lump crabmeat ceviche with ginger soy vinaigrette at Chefs and Champagne.

In 1996, Christian Mir and his wife Elaine Di Giacomo established a foothold in the Hamptons with the opening of Stone Creek Inn, on Old Montauk Highway in East Quogue. Christian, a native of Toulouse, France, a region famous for foie gras, duck and cassoulet, began his culinary education at 14 when he chose, along with the regular high school curriculum, a program in the culinary arts. For young chefs, moving around and working in many places is part of the process and so Christian sought other regions for inspiration, including Spain and Provence before coming to the United States and securing a position at Tavern on the Green in New York City. Here he met his lovely wife, Elaine, and literally fell in love over the steam table. Elaine, who had a degree in English literature, dreamed of having her own restaurant and with a strange twist of fate, Stone Creek Inn was born. Christian offers a delectable golden beet soup garnished with lobster and vegetable ragout for Chefs and Champagne.

David Cruces grew up in a food loving family. With his father from Mexico City and his Cuban-born mother, he no doubt ate very well at home. He worked in a café and local bakery during high school and, like young chefs before him, sought out his culinary career by traveling abroad and seeking positions at the best possible restaurants. David went to Spain in 2000 to work at El Bulli, near Barcelona, with Ferran Adria, famous for his scientific approach to cooking. He also traveled and worked in France and Italy. Returning to New York, he worked at such esteemed restaurants in New York City as Capsouto Freres, in lower Manhattan and Jo Jo's on the upper East Side, then opened Vongerichten's flagship restaurant at Columbus Circle. Inspired by a close personal friend, Sara Jenkins, who was the opening chef at Annona in Westhampton, NY, he came out to the East End. Ms. Jenkins decided to return to Manhattan and in January of this year, David became the executive chef of Annona. For his offering at Chefs and Champagne, guests will enjoy Four Story Hill Farms beef carpaccio with wild arugula, capers and shaved Parmesan dressing with Vin Santo vinegar and extra virgin olive oil.

Don't feel like cooking in this hot weather? There are many fine eateries to choose from!

Directly across from the Atlantic Ocean, the Surfside Inn Restaurant & Bar, in Montauk, has a new summer menu available, Lobster Extravaganza on Fridays and live music by Michael Dunn on Friday and Saturday throughout the summer. The Lobster Extravaganza is offered from 5 p.m. until closing. For more information or reservations call (631) 668-5958.

While on the North Fork, not visiting Jedediah's, located within Jedediah Hawkins Inn, would be a mistake. They are now offering lunch Monday thru Saturday from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and brunch on Sunday from 11:30 a.m. thru 2:30 p.m. For more information or for a peek at their sample menu go to www.jedediah-hawkinsinn.com or call them at (631) 722-2900. Also on the North Fork, don't miss The Seafood Barge with mouth watering dishes like blackened salmon with spinach; watermelon and goat cheese salad; poached grilled swordfish, served with a farm fresh egg fried in truffle butter, roasted green onions and mushroom sauce; and for dessert the delectable molten chocolate cake. For reservations call (631) 765-3010. While in Greenport check out Antares Café, which is open seven nights a week for dinner and Saturday and Sunday for lunch. They also offer a six-course tasting menu. For more information call (631) 477-8839.

Got the blues? In East Hampton, check out CoCo Restaurant, located in the Maidstone Arms, for their Wednesday night blues night featuring live entertainment by Johnny Blood and Joe Allegue. Starting at 5 p.m. they will be serving complimentary appetizers with the purchase of a beverage from the bar at the lounge and garden areas throughout the evening. The live music will be from 7 to 11 p.m. Some of the appetizers served will be gazpacho, shrimp and scallop cerviche, fried breaded brie with sweet red pepper puree, and Seared Tuna Sashimi. For more information call (631) 324-5008. Also in East Hampton, Michael's at Maidstone Beach, has introduced a new special on Barbecue Night, offered on Tuesday evenings. For $23.95 diners receive a three-course meal featuring a barbecue platter that includes choice of soup or salad, barbeque platter with ribs, barbeque chicken and pork chop with coleslaw, potato or rice and baked beans, and a choice of dessert. For more details call (631) 324-0725.

Tierra Mar is located within Atlantica. A sampling of their menu is Tierra Mar's bouillabaisse with toasted Tuscan bread, North Atlantic fish and shellfish stewed in a light garlic saffron broth; pan seared peppercorn crusted certified angus hanger steak, sliced with green peppercorn cream sauce, sautéed vegetable medley and oven roasted new potatoes. For a full view of their menu go to www.tierramar.com, or call (631) 288-2700 for reservations.

Look who is turning 10! Rowdy Hall, in East Hampton, is celebrating their 10th anniversary this month. They have successfully established themselves as a tried and true favorite for English-style pub and French bistro fare among locals and visitors alike. Owner Mark Smith has created a casual menu offering what has often been referred to as the "best burger in town." Open year-round seven days for lunch and dinner. Call them at (631) 324-8555 for reservations or more details.

For a yummy way to help out a great benefit go to the 15th annual Lobster Fest on Saturday, July 29th, at the Wharf House at Founders Landing in Southold. This is held to benefit local community service projects for Greenport and Southold Rotary Clubs. The cost for adults is $35 for advanced tickets and $40 at the door, and $7 for kids 12 and under. For more information on where to purchase tickets call (631) 477-9752 or (631) 734-2958.

Dining in the Hamptons

Nello Summertimes

136 North Main street
Southampton, NY
631-287-5500

Southampton Village's ristorante Nello Summertimes is a welcome addition to an area that lacks Sag Harbor and East Hampton's evening buzz. Occupying what is said to be Southampton's oldest building, dating back to the 1670s, Nello offers a lovely, comfortable and yet modern atmosphere and a varied menu filled with deliciously-prepared, satisfying yet light Italian fare. Robin Feman (of this paper) and I had a wonderful dinner.

Although food should be the principal draw to any restaurant – and the food certainly does not disappoint at Nello – I begin with the unique locale. The building at 136 North Main Street rests peacefully surrounded by hedges and separated from the street by old gates. The serene garden area provides ample outdoor seating under a striped canopy bringing to mind street-side cafes in Italy. Nearby is a small putting green for children.

The large dining room situated in a wonderful old room with exposed wood beams, two fireplaces and an interior balcony is cheerfully lit and simply decorated with white tablecloths and slipcovers, and pastel paintings. The large, two-sided oak bar provides contrast without in any way disrupting the airy feel of the room. To Robin, the décor brought to mind Palm Beach, Florida. I agreed, but also somehow thought of the movie Casablanca, perhaps because of the old room's character.

The menu offers a fine choice of salads, soups, antipasti, homemade pastas, meats and fish. All of the dishes rely on light summer produce and sauces, typical of Southern Italian cooking. Robin and I shared a sublime salad of sliced artichoke, avocado and pecorino, drizzled with white truffle oil. The crisp artichoke and luscious avocado blended together perfectly with each other and the pecorino, and the unexpected addition of truffle oil transformed an already unusual salad into something truly special. Simpler salads, such as a salada misti and a salada Ceasare, are also available.

The salads generally range in price from $11 to $16, as do the soups. The antipasti range from $21 to $32. Our salad cost $14, which strikes me as a deal given how expensive white truffle oil is. We did not order soup, although I was intrigued by the cream of asparagus soup as well as the cold yellow and red tomato soup. We also missed out on the antipasti, such as beef carpaccio and tuna tartare.

All of the pasta dishes, generally ranging from $21 to $38, are made with homemade pasta. There are several traditional sauces, such as clam sauce; fresh tomato, buffalo mozzarella and olive oil; and pesto. Robin ordered ravioli stuffed with spinach and ricotta, a dish that can be uninspired but not when made with homemade ravioli, as this version is. It was terrific. I ordered a seafood pasta containing shrimp, scallops, calamari, arugula and cherry tomatoes. The fresh ingredients reminded me of what summer cooking is all about and that pasta dishes do not have to be heavy.

Although we were quite satisfied given the appropriately-sized portions, we ordered entrees. The meats and fish generally range in price from $28 to $42. Among the meat dishes were traditional veal piccata and filet mignon with green peppercorns, but I chose the veal Milanese. Pounded thin on the bone, lightly breaded and sautéed, and served under a bed of arugula and tomatoes, this is one of my favorite dishes if made well. It was delicious, not overly breaded or soggy. (Most of the meats are not so pricey, but large veal cutlets are expensive.)

The fish dishes included simply prepared salmon with a balsamic cotti, red snapper with pomodoro, and tuna steak with grilled radicchio, among others. Robin ordered the red snapper. By this time, she was quite full, but the fish was so good that she took home the leftovers.

We also shared one of the restaurant's specials, a wonderful soft-shell crab, lightly crusted and served over ginger-infused rice. Although I usually prefer my soft-shell crab sautéed without any sauce, this dish has made me a convert. Other specials that Nello's chef particularly recommends are lobster salad, Dover sole and lobster ravioli.

A simple dessert tray was brought to us at the end; cheeses are also available. Although quite full, Robin and I shared a wonderful crème brule. I wished I had room for more. The wine list is extensive, with many selections from Italy as well as the United States, France, Germany and some "New World" wine countries. Although prices ranged broadly, including a list of expensive reserve Bordeaux, there are many good selections for $40 to $70.

The restaurant is open for dinner Wednesday through Sunday between 5 p.m. and midnight. Behind the main dining room is a large, attractive lounge, which is open for drinks and listening to music Thursday through Saturday from 11 p.m. until 4 a.m. The adjoining inn, where George Washington is said to have stayed, is already booked for the summer.

Go Fish

The extremely warm temperatures this past week have affected fishing conditions in East End waters. The waters warmed up quickly and fishing slowed in the bays, but offshore ocean fishing had a lot of action. A warm water eddy moved in closer to the shore and brought with it many large game fish such as tuna, dolphin (the fish) and sharks. Here are the reports from local fishing stations.

Donny, of East End Bait & Tackle in Hampton Bays, says bluefin tuna are being caught 10-15 miles off Shinnecock Inlet and yellowfin tuna are being captured inside the "Dip" beyond the Inlet in about 200-300 feet of water. There are also legal size fluke being caught at 30-50 feet depths outside the Inlet.

Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle in Sag Harbor reports that weakfish and porgies are being caught in Peconic Bay around Robins Island. The hot weather has negatively affected fluke fishing in the bays. Ken also says surfcasters have been catching striped bass and bluefish in the ocean surf between the Montauk IGA and Turtle Cove, just below the Montauk Lighthouse, around sunrise.

Harvey Bennett at The Tackle Shop in Amagansett says one of his clients caught a 12 lb. 9-ounce fluke at The Ruins north of Gardiners Island, and porgies are being caught in the ocean off Indian Wells beach.

Paul at Freddy's Bait & Tackle in Montauk tells me the porgies have returned in a big way after last week's full moon. Paul also reports there are porgies and fluke being caught off Shagwong Point.

If the air temperature goes down to the high 70s or low 80s, and there is an increase in small bait fish, the fishing should improve in the Peconic bays this week.

Any readers with current fishing experiences to share, please contact this column at YeOldeSalt@aol.com.

The Economy of Movement

The blazing sun and the heavy air combined today to transform the concrete streets of New York City into a sauna. Garbage rotted at alarming rates! Convenience stores sold out of water bottles! Stores on Broadway actually closed their doors to keep the precious air conditioning locked inside! But I trudged forward. Instead of rushing from my air conditioned classroom to the air conditioned subway, I decided to hoof it from the Brooklyn Bridge up to Soho to take in a yoga class and utilize the elasticity of my muscles. And what I learned was that perhaps I should have taken the train. Because in weather like this, it is important to be economical with your movements.

This is not to say that on hot summer days, you should sit in your house and do nothing all day. It is not to say that walking is frowned upon or that strenuous exercise should be shirked. Instead, this concept encourages us to be thoughtful with how we exert our energy on the hottest of days, because there is less energy to waste. You are sucking up enough energy simply sitting on a bench and sweating. So how are you going to go out running on a stifling evening?

Instead, you can utilize what energy you have by doing exercise that is close to the floor, that requires flexibility and stamina. Zhenja LaRosa, my Anusara Yoga instructor who brought the concept of the "Economy of Movement" to the forefront of my mind, welcomed us to class by having us all lie flat on our mats. Rarely do I start a yoga class the way I end it, in corpse pose. But by simply lying on my back, allowing the cool indoor air to dry the sweat on my skin, I was able to allow the heat of the walk to chill out of my body. We had a session that lasted an hour-and a half, but our movement was minimal and the benefits maximized. We remained in postures for a longer amount of time, taking advantage of the heat by sinking deeper into poses. We didn't jump from pose to pose, putting stress on our hearts. After all, you do hear about a lot more heart attacks on hot summer days than any other time. So it's not the time to push yourself on the cardiovascular level. But you can still be physically active through supported stretching and endurance. Hip openers like pigeon pose can be extremely beneficial to the body in hot weather. Hip openers help to release tension in the lower back and are good for the knees. Greater mobility in the hips improves vital blood circulation to the pelvic area, intestines, spinal disks, lumbar vertebrae, and reproductive glands and organs. In addition, by opening up the hips, you are accessing a part of your body that is often neglected. This region is thought to be a center for creative energy and emotion.

In fact, there is an entire school of yoga devoted to the harnessing of heat to enhance the practice. This form of yoga, Bikram, is practiced in a very hot room that causes students to sweat profusely. This sweating is thought to be cleansing, and the muscles are more elastic in the higher temperatures. Getting deeper into these stretches tones the inner organs like the liver, kidneys, spleen, and intestines. I would caution students not to stretch too far, though, as you can cause injury by over-stretching in the high temperatures when your muscles contract again in the cooler air.

By practicing patiently and carefully, you can have a deeply rewarding exercise regimen even on the most stifling of days. After dragging myself from obligation to obligation through the sweltering city day, I found myself completely rejuvenated by my economical workout. I was surprised that the time flew by so quickly, but was delighted to feel the deep reward of a strong practice in my muscles and organs. One thing I love about yoga is that it is never rigid. If it's a hot day, a good teacher will take that into account and use it to the students' advantage. There is no need to avoid movement and resort to simply vegging out. Instead, use the heat as a tool and make your movements calculated and careful. Perhaps we could even take the wisdom that Economy of Movement provides and incorporate it into our lives in the winter. There's never a need to be wasteful with our bodies, our energy, or our time.

HEALTH, BEAUTY & FITNESS

Polo Fit

How do you get toned thighs and adductors, a tight stomach, and a fit bum? Ride a horse up and down a polo field for two straight hours, that's how. Horseback riding in general is a fantastic lower body work out. Posting keeps your quadriceps and gluteus working as you trot down the pitch, but try hauling ass at 30 miles per hour, leaning fully extended, and swinging a mallet at the same time, and you get one hell of a total body workout.

The proper position while riding requires a strong core. If you've ever taken a turn a little too tightly while driving a car, you have felt your stomach tense up in an attempt to keep you in your seat, try a sharp turn while sitting on top of a horse, without the comfort of a form-fitting leather bucket seat. Keeping on a horse requires a great deal strength. Your abdominal muscles stay in a constant state of stimulation, as your adductors cling to the girth of your horse.

As a rider, your balance is constantly being compromised while the horse turns, stops, rears up, and runs. The more you ride, the more your body will be aware of these movements, and the faster it will trigger reactionary measures to keep you on the horse. After your first day in the saddle you will feel aches in muscles you didn't even know existed. These are called the sartorius muscles, which run from the hip to the inner tibia and are the longest muscles in your body. Even though the horse is the one that is doing all the running, an hour riding can burn the same amount of calories as a half-hour jog.

Now add the upper body movements. Though your left arm stays rather stationary compared to your right, the constant control of the horse, and maintaining proper position creates a combination of isometric and anaerobic exercise for the left arm. The right arm, the one swinging the mallet, on the other hand, gets an intense workout and stretch. On a near side forehand shot the deltoids and biceps get the brunt of the workout, but as soon as you start making neck shots you are incorporating the chest muscles across your body.

On other levels, polo increases your hand-eye coordination. Hitting a croquet ball from a stand-still isn't exactly difficult, but extend the mallet's shaft, shrink the size of the head, climb six feet atop a horse, and try to hit it while in motion. The difficulty, in the beginning, will be obvious, but as you progress, your ability to make contact and eventually control the direction of the ball while controlling the horse, will reap benefits in other activities such as tennis and golf, where movement and ball contact are crucial. In an intense match, your heart rate will spike as your adrenal glands kick in, which may sound like a bad thing, but tests have proven that people who momentarily push their hearts to higher rates for short periods stand a better chance of surviving a heart attack.

From a psychological aspect, playing on a team leads to a better understanding of one's self. You concentrate on the overall picture and not so much on the individual. Friendships arise, camaraderies are founded, and general happiness levels are higher than non-athletic persons. At the same time, while your teamwork skills will improve as you progress in your learning process, many find a boost in self-confidence which resonates to other aspects of your life; your job, your family, etc.

If you want to continue your workout, muck your own stalls. Sure you can hire someone to heave the manure and old straw from the floors, but this is a great opportunity to work out the lower back, legs, and arms. Grab the heaviest pitchfork you can find and go to town, heaving horse chestnuts into a wheelbarrow. Use the right form, bend at the knees, lift with the legs and arms, and keep aware of any strain you feel in your back. It's not exactly like shoveling cannon balls, but the repetition of this exercise over six stalls can lead to a weary back if done incorrectly.

With all these benefits, polo stands as an outstanding sport to keep you in shape for the summer. Sure there's a possibility you will get hit in the head with a mallet, or fall off the horse, but what is life without a little risk? Even if you're not about to pick up a mallet, just riding on a horse for an hour can offer relaxation, exhilaration, and a better view of life.

Sloop Of Serenity: Sag Harbor Sailing School

Instead of coming to work as usual last Friday, I spent the placid, sun-drenched morning aboard a ship, courtesy of the Sag Harbor Sailing School. Gliding on wind currents across glassy black water – legs outstretched, one hand on the helm – I was reminded why I love it out here in the Hamptons.

Forgive me as I wax poetic, but sometimes the beauty of this place is easy to overlook in the overcrowded months. Inland of these tranquil shores are shoppers with beeping cell phones, cringing drivers in backed-up traffic, sidewalks crowded with weekenders, yipping kids, crying dogs.

The solution is the sea, and one short session on a sailboat proved enough tranquility to last me the weekend.

When we arrived, Robin and I found our way to the dock, met our guide, Bob Sullivan, also co-owner of Sag Harbor Sailing, and climbed aboard the 23-foot Pearson Ensign sloop. Those wary of the sea will be comforted to know that it's almost impossible to capsize this boat. In fact, Bob said it would take some "raucous and furious wave" to jostle this sturdy ship and went on to explain the structural basis for his claim, all the while teaching us a few rigging tips, and how to find the direction of the wind.

Switching off as skipper, we crossed the bay, cuddling the needle-like Peninsula called Jessup's Neck, a strip of land that has remained undisturbed since the settlers found it in 1649. This deserted point is comprised of long stretches of quiet, white sand beach that frames a wildlife preserve. Overhead were soaring ospreys, some winging back to their nests to feed their noisy broods. By the water's edge, one sees ghostly stripers in the shallow water.

Hitting the high seas with Sag Harbor Sailing

Sag Harbor Sailing is a maritime sanctuary off Pine Neck Road in Noyac. Here, all levels of sailors are welcome to attend the ASA-accredited school or just rent a boat for the day. For adult beginners, they offer a two-day keelboat course, which entails one and one-half hour instructions each morning with four hours of sailing in the afternoon. The instruction is precise and quite technical, and courses with Mark Tompkins are known for being very informative. For those who just want to get out there and sail, no fuss, lessons with Bob proved a more laidback option. Also, ASA certified instructors are available for $75 per hour.

Besides 23-foot sloops, the company offers a 28-foot Islander and a 34-foot Catalina as well as bareboat charters. Those less inclined to sailing school might rent a boat for the day for $300, or a half-day for $250, with or without a skipper, or take a lesson from one of many guides. The Catalina, a 34-footer, can be rented for a full day at $495. It offers double staterooms and sleeps seven. Split among a group of friends, that's less expensive than any half decent meal out here.

Kayak rentals are also available at Sag Harbor Sailing, also at more than reasonable rates. (3 hours is $35 and 8 hours is a measly $60/$70 for a double.) Less experienced paddlers can hire a guide for $25 per hour, or get a lesson for $45.

If the world seems to be full of low ceilings and narrow hallways, there is a watery escape just off Pine Neck road. After our lesson with Bob, we shook hands with our mellow guide and turned towards the car, and inevitably, our air-conditioned office spilling over with papers.

"Thank you for the sail, Bob," I said and without any intention of sounding effusive or peculiar, I blurted, "Thanks for making our lives better."

Robin shot me an amused glance and he chuckled.

So I sounded a bit demented at the time, but I truly feel I'm on to something here.

A sail every morning, an evening kayak, perhaps at lunch break, a short excursion through some bucolic cove. This could be the answer to rush hour, to obnoxious velvet ropes.

While sometimes hectic, The East End is enchanting and a quick walk to the water's edge is all you need to remember that. Better yet, try a sail with this fine establishment, gain some knowledge and more importantly, some peace of mind.

–Julia Nasser

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

There is always something exciting happening in the real estate world on the East End. There are fundraisers held on sprawling estates, elaborate open house functions on the oceanfront, art on the walls of businesses, the Designer Showhouse, which is held at a new location each year, and even an occasional mansion is auctioned.

At the end of this month realtors in the Quogue and Westhampton Beach areas will be participating in what has been dubbed "The $25 Million Dollar House Tour." This event will combine the marketing of five East End estates currently for sale in the area and a fundraiser to benefit local charities. Tickets will be sold for the house tour and five East End realtors get to show some of their prize listings. In order to participate, each home must be for sale and must be valued at more than $5 million dollars. Various brokers in the area will be showing off the very best of what they have to offer.

Jedediah Hawkins' House

In Quogue, The Corcoran Group will be showing the Rosner Estate on the ocean on Dune Road. This home is backed by more than 60 acres of preserved land saved by the Peconic Land Trust. It was designed by distinguished architect Jay Lockett Sears and is priced at $7,900,000. It can also be rented for $75,000 per summer month. The expansive home is set in the dunes and has views of both the ocean and bay. It has a heated waterside pool, a fireplace in the master suite and wrap around decks that encompass the entire home.

Brown Harris Stevens has added one of their Westhampton Beach Listings to the tour. The traditional estate owner by Candice and Steven Stark is set on 1.6 acres that has a deep-water dock with a 90 ft pier and 300 ft of bulkheading. The home has 8 bedrooms and 8.5 baths. There is a heated gunite pool and two pool houses, one of which includes a full bath. This 6500 sq ft 1920s traditional is listed for $12 million.

In Remsenburg, First Hampton Realty has added a stately colonial to the tour at $5,500,000. This one has 6 bedrooms, five baths, a sunroom, library with fireplace, pool, poolhouse, tennis court, and water views on all sides. It also has a two car garage with an apartment above. The property includes two acres and a fully bulkheaded deepwater dock.

Also in Remsenburg is a 10,000 sq ft traditional home that is reached from a private road and gated entrance. The 6-bedroom, five-bath home sits on five very private acres. The master suite has two balconies and the gourmet kitchen is 1500 sq ft alone. The estate, owned by Amy & Matt Robinson, includes 3 ponds, a gunite pool, gazebo, tennis court, guest cottage, and yoga studio. There is an oversized dock on Fish Creek. It is listed with Prudential Douglas Elliman at $7,995,000.

Marketplace Realty in Westhampton Beach has also added a home to the tour. Owners Diane & Dan Minc have placed their oceanfront home on the market for $7,300,000. It has all the features that make for a true Hamptons beach cottage perched right in the dunes. It has an oceanside pool and Jacuzzi. The 4400 sq ft consists of a gourmet kitchen, a master suite with spectacular bay views, mahogany decking and an entertainment area. There are panoramic ocean views and a private beach access that leads to 100 feet of ocean frontage.

The house tour will benefit The Making Headway Foundation, Westhampton Beach BOCES Special Education and The Hurricane Educational Foundation. The tour will take place July 28.

Also making real estate news is the most expensive listing in the country. It seems there is finally an estate price that can rival that of any seen here in the Hamptons. Just this week a mansion owned by a prince was placed on the market at an unbelievable $135 million dollars. This 97-acre spread out in the Colorado mountains has just about anything and everything one could possibly want, need or desire including a replica of the owner's favorite English pub.

BUCK UP, BILL
Dear Dan,

The Village of Southampton is currently receiving an inordinate amount of unfavorable attention in connection with its annual and recently concluded Fourth of July Parade.

Bill Frankenbach, Parade Chairman, in particular is the focus of much unjustified criticism. While the protesters receive accolades for what is perceived as their "courageous stand" against what they claim a violation of their freedom of speech and first amendment rights – which was never the issue in question. The issue simply was their intrusion into an event which was heretofore staged solely to honor veterans and celebrate the birthday of the most progressive nation on the planet. The disruption of this peaceful event was totally inappropriate!

The Village stands ready to issue a permit to protesters anytime who wish to stage their own Rally or Parade.

The patriarch of a close-knit family, Bill and his wife, Colleen, kids and grandkids work all year to produce this event. On the very day following this year's parade work began on the complex and arduous task of producing next year's celebration. Perhaps a bit crusty when his patience is tried, as it surely has been in recent days. He is a generous and fair minded man, an unabashed patriot who loves our country and reveres the flag. As commander of the Combined Veterans Organization, Bill also organizes the Memorial Day Parade and ceremonies on November 11. Plus the exciting firemen's muster in the fall.

Since Bill is not retired somewhere between he must slot some time to earn a living! I know all this is embarrassing to him but it simply must be said.

Isn't it time for him and his family to be recognized for their remarkable service?

Earnestly.

Hank Schnieder
Southampton

Bill Frankenbach is a great asset to this community and a force to be reckoned with. –DR

GETTING AN EDUCATION
Dear Dan,

Working on a Television project and in need of families to participate. Thinking of advertising in your paper, but also thought it might be worth an article. Subject matter - Getting In to Kindergarten in NYC. Below about the project.

Touch Productions, a prestigious award winning British production company, is teaming up with Victoria Goldman, the best-selling author of "The Manhattan Family Guide to Private and Selective Public Schools," and independent filmmaker, Pamela French, native New Yorker and mother of two, to tell the story of the choices and challenges New York parents face in finding and getting into an school that's the right fit.

Touch has been commissioned to make a documentary special for US Network called "Getting In". This segment of the program will depict this insanely competitive, anxiety-riddled and sometimes traumatic ritual peculiar to 21st century life in New York City, through the eyes of three selected families as they undergo what has become a daunting quest for all New Yorkers, and a subject of keen fascination to outsiders: to get their children into a 'Good' elementary school.

The co-producers are now seeking families interested in participating in this timely documentary.

The film will follow each of the three families, from their first tentative questions at a "school night," through the parent and child interviews, up to the moment when they receive the letter that will determine where their children will be going to school. Ms. French will also document the progress, in less detail, of several other families on the same journey, with expert commentary each step of the way.

Viewers will witness the often emotionally-fraught issues and difficult decisions that come up during this trying process: affordability, public vs. private education, their own social aspirations, exposing their young kids to competitive testing and interviews, and, most importantly, which school might actually be best for their child.

This film is about the families and the children themselves. It's about the trials and tribulations of the application process and what this peculiar journey reveals both to and about the people involved.

Some of the top admissions officials from the best private schools are already lined up for this project. So are a Parent League Representative and other experts. We are still searching for more applicant families interested in sharing their experiences during the course of this 7-month process.

It is our hope that you will help us contact parents who would be willing to be interviewed. We are looking for parents from all socio-economic backgrounds and ethnicities, which will allow us into their lives as they embark on this unique rite of passage.

Thank you for taking the time to consider our project. If you would like to know more about the quality of work Touch Productions produces, please visit the website - www.touchproductions.co.uk . It is our hope that we will have the opportunity to work with you.

I can be reached at: pamelafrench@touchproductions.co.uk

HOME IS WHERE THE HOME IS
Dear Dan,

I just read your article about the historic house that moved here from Connecticut that you were debating the rescue of. I own a parcel of land in Amagansett that I need a home on. Do you think the owner would be interested in having me move it to my lot?

Peter Feldman
Via e-mail

Yes. –DR

FOLLOW THROUGH
Dear Dan,

I got hold of the people on Friday who are working on the home, and I am third in line for the house.

Thanks for your response though.

Peter Feldman
Via e-mail

Good Luck. –DR

THANKS
Dear Dan,

We were just in New York, and picked up the latest issue of Dan's Papers. It looked great! I see you still have the energy and smarts to write half the paper. Terrific articles. Terrific paper.

Hope all is well.

Police Blotter

Not Much Of A Friend

A woman in Amagansett lent her 1989 Ford Mustang to a friend who went to go pick up some lobsters. The friend never returned and the woman called the police. Police think that the culprit either stole the car, or was eaten by man- eating lobsters.

Trailer President

The president of a trailer park in East Hampton called police when he noticed that several mailboxes had been damaged. He is considering a retaliation strike against teenagers.

6 Men In A Hot Tub

A woman in Wainscott called police when she came home to her house and found six men sitting in her hot tub. The men were in their late twenties. When they saw the woman arrive, they fled the scene in a black Jeep. These guys really need to find themselves some girlfriends.

Dead Dinghy

A man in Sag Harbor called police when he noticed that somebody slashed holes into his inflatable dinghy, causing it to sink. The man has started a dive site at the location of the dinghy wreck. It is the smallest wreck dive site in the world.

Montauk Purse Thief

A man in Montauk stole two purses out of the hands of two separate women on two separate occasions at a bar in Montauk. Police are telling women to put live rattlesnakes in their purses.

Screaming Music

A woman in East Hampton called police when she saw a man walking by her house screaming obscenities and pointing at her. When police found the man, he explained to them that he was just singing along to music on his headphones. The album he was listening to? Die You #$@#@ Stupid $##&@%, I @#$&# Hate You, by none other then Hamptons resident and world famous rapper, Freaky $#& Master $#!#.*

Not Too Smooth With The Ladies

A man walked into a surf shop in Southampton, took off his clothes and exposed himself. He then proceeded to put on woman's clothes and tried on several different woman's bathing suits. He then propositioned the female employee at the shop, put on his clothes, and left the store. Kids, this is why you shouldn't do drugs.

Horse Rescue

A woman named Barbara in Bridgehampton saved three horses that got loose near the Tuckahoe School. When she ran to catch the horses she dropped her bags. While horse rescuing, somebody stole $100 after going through her bags. Will somebody please give this woman's $100 back? She is a hero.

Damaged Cars

A man in East Hampton called police when he noticed broken windows on a Ford Futura, a Subaru GL and a GMC truck that were all parked near one another. Police that responded to the call were quoted saying, "What the hell is a Ford Futura?"

Prayer to The Blessed Virgin. (Never known to fail) Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of heaven, Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity, Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me herein you are my mother. Oh, Holly Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh show me herein, you are my mother. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3x). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3x). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goals. You who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances in my life you with me, I want in this short payer to thank you for all things as you confirm once gain that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this payer 3 consecutive days. After three days the request will be granted.This prayer must be published after favor's granted. My prayers were answered. Thank you so very much. 3-1-3.

A Return to Gold Coast Estate Living, the Way It Was Meant to Be.

A limited-edition community in a spectacular, heavily forested hilltop setting, Stone Hill at Muttontown is pleased to offer estate home luxury that Long Island has not seen in almost a century.

With cul-de-sac homesites of up to 2+ acres...One-of-a-kind designs that pay homage to Old World style while improving upon it.... Top-of-the-line features and finishes by the likes of Miele, SubZero and Bose...A private club featuring an indoor pool, tennis court and spa-quality fitness facilities...365 days of complete landscape maintenance so your family can relax and enjoy it all... Plus around-the-clock security with a manned gatehouse entry and surveillance system.

In addition, the award-winning Syosset-Woodbury School District is one of Long Island's finest and most desired.

Stone Hill at Muttowntown. The opportunity your family truly deserves. Don't miss it.
